GOV. WALSH'S 'O. K.' FOR FORD'S SHIP

Two Witnesses Missing in Ship Plot Case

ROBBERY FRAMEUP BY BOYS

Roland Pelletier, the 16-year-old Salem boy who today was found tied to a chair in the Devoe Smart Shop, on Essex street, Salem, after he had tipped over a telephone and told the operator that the store had been robbed, confessed, after a four-hour "third degree" at Salem police headquarters that two other boys, older than himself, had planned the robbery, and that he had submitted to them with the hope of big loot.

The Pelletier boy was taken to the police station by Lieutenants Barrett and Lehan, after the robbery had been discovered. After a searching examination he confessed that with Ernest Levesque, 15, and another Salem boy, they had planned and carried out the robbery. Levesque was immediately located and placed under arrest. The other boy, who is said to be about Levesque's age, is still at large.

According to the Pelletier boy's story the robbery was the first of a series planned by the trio. It was intended that he should be "held up" next Saturday when he went to the bank with money for his uncle, Pierre Pelletier, of Jefferson avenue, a grocer, as he was in a habit of doing each week. Today's robbery was just a "try-out." Pelletier was chore boy at the Devoe shop. He opened it up every morning shortly after 7 o'clock. The amount secured in today's "try-out" was $4 from Pelletier and $3.90 from the cash register.

Jack Johnson Aids England in Recruiting

GLASGOW, Nov. 26.—Jack Johnson, negro pugilist and former heavyweight champion, has joined Lord Derby in the work of getting recruits for the British army.

Driving up in front of the Royal Exchange today in a powerful racing car, Johnson stopped his machine, stood up, removed his white "topper" and made a speech that fairly sizzled with ardor.

"Every man ought to enlist," shouted Johnson. "It is your duty." Soon a mob of 4,000 persons blocked traffic in the streets. Despite the widespread interest, only nine recruits were secured.

Johnson is appearing at a music hall with his white wife, who is billed as "one of the most beautiful women in America and the originator of the oyster dance."

New Bank Plan Help to South African Trade

Trade between Boston and South Africa is expected to be facilitated as a result of a new banking arrangement announced today.

The National Shawmut Bank has become the New England correspondent of the National Bank of South Africa, a government institution there, with total assets in the neighborhood of $125,000,000.

The bank has control of transfers of gold from the African colonies to London, and almost controls exchange between Africa and England.

Plan Military Camp for Boys

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 26.—Plans are being made for the Summer encampment for military training for boys between the ages of fifteen and seventeen. Trustees of the St. Paul School have offered a site for the encampment and a drill grounds. The encampment will accommodate about 400 and will be limited to students of private schools.

Major General Leonard Wood has promised to furnish military instruction and the school will be under control of United States military officers.

IRISH ANTI-WAR MOVE

PROTEST IN IRELAND GROWS

DUBLIN BY MAIL TO NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Ireland has responded nobly to the call of the King, but the naked fact remains that the war is not popular here.

The patriotic appeals of Joan Redmond, T. P. O'Connor, Sir Edward Carson and others have been answered by all factions of Irish political parties, but within the past two months more than 5,000 young Irishmen of fighting age have been turned back, some forcibly, from emigration.

England is keeping a close watch upon the radical Irish newspapers for there have been told expressions of late showing that the opposition to the war in Ireland is crystallizing into a movement which may result in decisive action.

The unpopularity of the war in Ireland is not due entirely to the work of German agents, although there have been emissaries of the Kaiser on active duty here since the war began.

The common phrase is: "Why should Ireland bleed and die in a war that will get her nothing? This is England's war, not Ireland's. England has all to gain through victory, but a victory would mean nothing to Ireland, save the loss of thousands of her gallant sons."

So great became the tide of emigration from Ireland that the Cunard line, the Anchor line and practically all the other big steamship lines have adopted a rule, at the suggestion of the War Office, not to carry young Irishmen to the United States.

Lord Derby, who is now in charge of the recruiting, is paying particular attention to Ireland. In fact there are complaints that the inducements amount usually to compulsion.

That is another ground for Irish resentment. It is charged that the Irish are being driven into the army in one way or another, while the young Englishmen are allowed to remain immune.

The London Times estimated that the average number of young Irishmen leaving for Liverpool to take passage to the United States (before the steamship lines agreed to carry them any longer) was 200 a week. The young men were nearly all sons of farmers, the chief exodus being from Connaught. The Times denies that the money carried by these "runaways" was furnished by Germany.

The Telegraph, in order to discourage emigration from Ireland, declared that they would get a cold reception in the United States, where they would be regarded as cowards.

German Cruiser Sunk in Baltic by a Submarine

By International News Service.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26.—The German cruiser Frauenlob has been sunk by a submarine in the Baltic, according to a semi-official announcement made here today.

The cruiser was probably torpedoed by one of the British underwater boats that have been destroying shipping for several weeks. The Frauenlob, which displaced 2,672 tons, was a slow craft and would have had little chance to escape from a speedy modern submarine.

The cruiser was built at Bremen in 1902 and carried 275 officers and men. Its length was 328 feet.

The cruiser belonged to the same class as the Undine, which was recently sunk.

New Haven Orders 100 Steel Coaches

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company has placed orders for new equipment that will represent an expenditure of between $2,800,000 and $2,900,000, as follows:

One hundred steel passenger train cars, thirty-three heavy freight locomotives and two steel dining cars. The equipment will all be of the late type and the freight locomotives are more powerful than any heretofore bought by the New Haven.

Inquest on Death of Coast Artillery Man

The inquest on the death of Carl R. McLellan, thirty-three years old, a private in Company 152, Coast Artillery, stationed at Fort Banks, was held today before Special Justice Charles J. Brown in the East Boston Court.

McLellan was killed on the night of October 25, while walking on the tracks of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad, between Wood Island and Harbor View.

10 Killed, 30 Hurt in Arkansas Tornado

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 26.—In the district surrounding Hot Springs, Ark., which was swept by a tornado, ten persons were killed and thirty injured. No damage was done in Hot Springs itself.

SAYS LIGHT CONTRACTS DIFFER

John A. Coulthurst of the City Council, who led the fight in the City Council last year over the electric lighting contract with the Edison Company, was asked today by the AMERICAN what answer he had to make to Mayor Curley's claim that the electric lighting contract finally adopted had the same price as originally recommended in the first contract. Mr. Coulthurst replied:

"The half truth is sometimes more misleading than a downright falsehood."

The Mayor said:

"The present lighting contract under which a saving to the taxpayers of $1,800,000 during the life of the contract has been effected, was held up by the Council for a period of more than six months and finally adopted at the price as recommended by me."

Mr. Coulthurst said:

"Now it is true that both contracts had the same price, but in the first contract it was a constant price, to remain fixed during the ten-year life of the contract. In the second contract it was a maximum price, subject to reduction by the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners sitting as a Board of Arbitrators to fix a fair price.

"Moreover, there is a further provision in the second contract providing for a revision of the price by the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners at the end of five years. These two important provisions in the contract were the cause of the delay and of the fight in which the Mayor and the Edison Company were lined up on one side and the City Council on the other.

"At the present time a petition is pending before the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners in accordance with the terms of the second contract, asking them to determine the price. The case is being conducted by Corporation Counsel John A. Sullivan, and he has stated to me that he expects the commission to award the city a considerable reduction. Now in view of these facts, the claim of the Mayor that the price in the two contracts is identical, is clearly not true, and there must be an intention to mislead the public on this matter, the most important proposition that came up before the City Council last year."

POINT LOST IN PLOT DEFENCE

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Two witnesses who failed to answer to their names when called by the government today added to the air of mystery about the Hamburg-American line conspiracy trial before Federal Judge Howe.

Roger B. Wood, Assistant District Attorney, declared that the missing witnesses were in town and would appear, but at the same time the court ordered a ten-minute recess and Wood went into conference with his chief, H. Snowden Marshall.

The defence lost an important contention when Wood was allowed to call George W. Atkinson, a coal dealer of Baltimore, who sold the cargo of coal to the Marina Quesada, formerly the Gladstone. William Rand, Jr., for the defence, objected vigorously, but was overruled.

SIGNED MANIFEST.

Atkinson said he sold the coal and went to Norfolk to sign the manifest. He swore the ship was sailing for Valparaiso, "to the best of my knowledge."

GOVERNOR INDORSES MISSION ABROAD

Governor Walsh today telegraphed Henry Ford praising as an "excellent mission" the plan of Mr. Ford to send a "peace ship" to Europe, and regretting that, unless the trip is postponed, he cannot accept Mr. Ford's invitation to be one of the passengers on the vessel.

His telegram read:

Mr Henry Ford,

DAVID I. WALSH,

Governor James B. McCreery of Kentucky asked that the trip be delayed till his successor takes office on December 6.

Governor Goldsborough of Maryland declined. Governor Clark of Iowa asked further details. Governor Williams of Vermont wanted particulars.

Governor Ferris of Michigan declined, as did Governor Stuart of Virginia.

MEET MONDAY TO LAY LINES FOR CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Mobilization of Congress and the laying of lines of battle for the commencement of the fray on December 6 will begin at the Capitol Monday. The developments of the week are being watched by the political strategists with much keener interest than the actual opening of Congress.

Sharp skirmishing is certain at the Senate Democratic caucus. Fighting is expected to centre upon the ciotura resolution, which Senator Owen will introduce for approval. It is believed that the conference will approve the resolution, which means a fight on the floor right from the start.

The conference will also have before it the selection of a president pro tem of the Senate and a floor leader.

Opposition has arisen to the re-election of Senator Clarke of Arkansas as president pro tem because of his alliance with the Republican filibuster against the ship purchase bill last session.

There is talk of electing in his place Senator Kern, of Indiana, the present floor leader. This, of course, would necessitate the finding of a new floor leader, and there is much perplexity among the Democratic Senators as to the wisest selection for this important place.

On Monday also the Ways and Means Committee will meet to tackle the knotty problem of increasing the federal income sufficiently to meet the annual deficit and the billion dollar defence program of the administration. The committee members seem agreed that the best plans for raising money are extending the scope of the war tax, reducing exemptions and raising the sur tax under the income tax law, and possibly taxing war profits. One or all of these suggestions may be adopted.

While the Ways and Means Committee is trying to find the money; the budget commission will be meeting to devise a systematic manner for spending it. It is doubtful whether any method will be agreed upon because of the wide differences of opinion among the committee members.

PLAN TO AID EXPORTS SEEMS DOOMED

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Failures of the State Department to approve the recently projected American Over-Seas Corporation, designed to aid American exporters on "an absolutely impartial basis," probably will result in an abrupt ending of the undertaking.

The plan was launched by New York, Philadelphia and Richmond capitalists to facilitate shipments of American products to and from neutral nations.

Secretary Redfield, while expressing a desire to co-operate unofficially with the projectors, did not officially recognize the plan. His encouragement was based upon the corporation's announced purpose to extend its privileges to all-comers, but representations came to the State Department that the new concern in its practical workings would necessarily resemble a close corporation, so officials carefully refrained from giving assistance to the project in establishing subsidiaries in foreign countries.

It develops that an official of the corporation who went abroad a month ago to perfect plans and establish branches, found the governments with which it was planned to co-operate slow to acquiesce in a movement without assurances of a definite character from Washington, and it is not now believed that the plan will be carried through.

Violence Feared by Anti-Saloon Sign Bearers

Superintendent of Police Crowley has been notified by the Anti-Saloon League that the sign put before the Village Church, Dorchester Lower Mills, announcing the meeting of Major Dan Morgan Smith for the Boston dry campaign, has been destroyed by rocks.

The complaint was made by the League officials, following information received, that rowdies in the interest of the liquor dealers were preparing to assail the sign bearers of the dry forces.

This week's signs proclaiming the advent of speakers and epigrams on the dry forces are to be prominently displayed throughout Boston. It is stated at the League headquarters that an immense amount of money has been raised by the brewers and liquor dealers to fight the no-license move.

Prize Beauty Offers Blood to Save Girl

EASTON, Md., Nov. 26.—Many offers have been made by persons willing to give their blood to save the life of Miss Grace Marshall, held prisoner in her home as demented for twelve years, and who now is in a hospital here.

One came from Miss Lorraine Milson of Roland Park, a suburb of Baltimore, who recently won a prize as the most shapely girl in Baltimore. She seemed disappointed on being told by Dr. Davidson that Miss Marshall had made such satisfactory progress that he did not believe transfusion would be necessary. However, he told her that if it should become desirable he would call upon her.

NEW STORY OF EXECUTION OF EDITH CAVELL

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—An entirely new and circumstantial story of the execution of Miss Edith Cavell, the British nurse, as a spy by the Germans in Belgium, has reached this city through Frederick Schwed, a young broker, who, having made a lot of money last Spring in war stocks, went abroad to see at first hand what war was really like.

Through persons he knew in Berlin, who had intimate knowledge of the killing of the Englishwoman, Mr. Schwed was told the details of her death and what Germany at large thought of the killing.

This much may be summarized from Mr. Schwed's experience.

Miss Cavell was killed while lying on the ground in a faint.

All of official Germany deplores her execution—not on moral ground, but because it was a stupid thing.

Schwed returned to his country on the Holland-America liner Rijndam on Wednesday.

NURSE SHOT IN FAINT.

The most important thing the young broker talked about was the case of Miss Cavell.

"A good bit of my time abroad I spent in Berlin," Mr. Schwed said, "I speak German fluently, and I met a great number of influential men, both in and out of the army and the Foreign Office.

"Miss Cavel was executed while I was in Germany and I heard a great deal of talk about her end. Those who told me were in positions high enough to know all the facts, and this is the story as I got it:

"Usually in a firing squad of German soldiers told off to kill a crook there are ten men. Two of the rifles are loaded with blank cartridges. But in this case thirty soldiers were assigned to do the killing. Twenty of the rifles were loaded with blank cartridges, then man were told, in order to lessen the individual responsibility.

OFFICERS YIELD TO MEN.

"When the guards went to Miss Cavell's cell on the morning of her execution they found her in a very weak, almost helpless condition. She hadn't taken anything to eat or drink within twenty-four hours. They led her on the courtyard, where she was to sit upon a chair, but before she reached the chair she fainted and fell upon the paving.

"When they saw Miss Cavell fall to the ground unconscious, the common soldiers, the privates, surrounded their officers and begged that they be allowed to shoot the woman right away, if they must shoot her at all. The officers were all for allowing her to revive and then placing her in her chair and carrying out the execution in the regular formal manner.

"The officers were obliged to capitulate, and tell the men that they might go ahead and fire at Miss Cavell while she lay senseless upon the ground. The routine was carried through hurriedly. The soldiers got their orders—"ready," "aim," fire!"

GERMANY REGRETS DEED.

"There was a great volley, but when Miss Cavell's body was examined it was found that it had been penetrated by only one single bullet from the ten loaded rifles. This had gone through the head. All the other shots had missed.'

"It wasn't a shot from an officer's revolver that killed Miss Cavell," continued Mr. Schwed. "It was, as I was told, a rifle ball.

"Now, as to the effect of her death, in Germany it was regarded as a big blunder.

"They deplore it, honestly. Not upon moral grounds—not because she was a woman, a nurse who had helped hundreds of sufferers, that was put to death, no, but they thought it was a stupid thing from a psychological point of view—that it would make so many enemies for the Fatherland and would inspire to further hatred those who wer already Germany's foes.

Mr. Schwed met and talked with dozens of army officers, diplomats, secret service men and others high up in the service of the Kaiser. Basing his opinion upon what they told him, he is of this belief:

"If the Cavell matter had ever been referred to the German government at Berlin instead of being left entirely in the hands of General von Bissing, who was in supreme command in Belgium, the nurse would be alive today.

"General von Bissing's action is disapproved by Germany, both official and unofficial. From what I have heard it will not be long before he will quietly drop out of sight.

NEW SUFFRAGE LEADER MAY BE CHICAGO WOMAN

MRS. GRACE WILBUR TROUT.

Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, of Chicago, noted author and lecturer, is being prominently mentioned as a successor to Dr. Anna Howard Shaw as president of the National Woman's Suffrage League. Mrs. Shaw has announced her intention to retire from the presidency at the close of her present term of office.

Mrs. Trout, who has long been an ardent worker in the cause, and who has delivered many lectures throughout the country on the subject, is a native of Marquketa, Ia. She was educated in the schools of that vicinity, specializing in elocution and expression.

After her marriage to George W. Trout she moved to Chicago, where she has lived ever since. She occupies a beautiful home in the Oak Park district. She has three sons.

Mrs. Trout, a few years ago, became greatly interested in the subject of Mormonism. She made an exhaustive study of the subject and eventually wrote a book on it, entitled "A Mormon Wife." The book enjoyed a wide sale.

Mrs. Trout was president of the Illinois Suffrage Association in 1912 and led the famous Springfield campaign which won women the right to vote for many of the offices in Illinois. This privilege was granted the women by a law passed by the State Legislature in 1913.

As an orator on suffragism Mrs. Trout is known all over the country. Her best known lectures on the subject are entitled: "Suffrage from an American Woman's Standpoint," and "The English Novel as a Social Protest."

Unknown Ends Life in Roxbury Field

Lying in some bushes in a field on Weld street, near Centre street, West Roxbury, the body of an unidentified man about forty-eight, who had shot himself in the forehead, was discovered by two women. Beside him lay a 38-calibre revolver.

The women notified Captain Clinton W. Bowley of the West Roxbury police station, who reported the case to Medical Examiner Leary.

The medical examiner ordered the body removed to the City Hospital morgue. The man had been dead about four days. In the chamber of the revolver were found four loaded cartridges besides the empty one which had been fired.

He is described as weighing about 170 pounds, five feet ten inches in height. He had black hair mixed with gray and wore a lightweight black overcoat, blue coat and mixed gray trousers. His shoes were black lace and he wore a blue soft hat. He carried an open-faced gold Waltham watch.

We make durability the first consideration. It is durability that we think of in selecting the materials, but this does not make them less attractive. We do not forget durability in designing the styles, whether plain or fancy, yet we do not allow that other coats are prettier than ours. We think of durability most of all in ordering the workmanship and linings, etc., with the result that the coats wear as long as the fabrics themselves. A few examples:

CRIPPLES HOLD SALE OF XMAS GOODS

If you will visit the Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children at No. 241 St. Botolph street, which has just opened its annual Christmas sale of school products, ninety little twisted bodies and ninety pale, plaintive faces will convince you that you should do your Christmas shopping there.

This year the sale is being held in the school building and the two alcoves at either side of the main entrance on the first floor have been temporarily turned into a fairyland of Christmas dainties, fashioned by little hands endued with a skill in proportion to the pleasures of life that are denied them.

HELP THE UNFORTUNATES.

To supply one's Christmas list from the cripples' "shop" is to add one more element to the joy of giving, the joy of helping the unfortunate. The two may be easily and pleasantly combined.

If at Christmas time you give your friend a basket or a bag or a table cover made by one of these little cripples, struggling against the handicaps of fate, you will also give the child, indirectly, proper remuneration for the work on which he depends largely for support.

The work which the children perform in the industrial departments of the school, sewing, printing, basket-making, etc., is an important source of income to them. It opens up to them the possibilities of living lives worth while, and it frequently opens up in the hearts of those who buy their products a new conception of the temper, the feeling, the taste and the ingenuity that lurk in little bodies that are supported by crutches and trusses.

VARIETY OF ARTICLES.

The work which the children have turned out this year, as in other years, is something for the ordinary person to wonder over. There are aprons, pincushions, knitting bag aprons, muff and coat hangers, baby sets, pillows, towels with cross-stitch design and a score of other sewed articles so dainty and perfect as to distinguish them from the goods of the handicraft novelty counter. There are models of children's dresses and coats for which orders will be taken.

There are baskets of every description, some made of willow, delicately shaded in green and yellow, others of reed, occasionally stained brown and green.

There are printed books of men's and women's laundry lists and framed laundry rules, so perfectly done that the printing department has been engaged to meet the jobs that come from a reputation. The prices are very reasonable.

Go and see for yourself any weekday between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., or any Saturday between 9 and 12.

French Ship Foils Attack by U-Boat

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The Ministry of Marine states that the French steamer Tafna was shelled by a submarine in the eastern Mediterranean, but that the captain of the steamer, with remarkable quickness of decision, steered his vessel into the teeth of the gale, and that the submarine, unable to keep up its speed against the head seas, relinquished the chase after firing three shells.

The communication adds that some of the passengers, aided by a few members of the crew, notwithstanding the express orders of the Tafna to the contrary, lowered boats, which were immately swamped. The Tafna has arrived safely at Marseilles.

1,865 Bay State Men at Harvard

Massachusetts leads in enrollment of students at Harvard, with 1,865 men, a falling off from last year's figures. New York is second with 454, and Pennsylvania third with 179. Boston has enrolled 306 men, with Cambridge second, with 254; New York city third, with 187, and Brookline fourth, with 127.

Canada tops the foreign country representation with a registration of 37, with China second, with 22, and Japan third, with 10.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Dines 300 Boys

NEWPORT, Nov. 26.—Three hundred newsboys and messenger boys were the dinner guests of Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt at Masonic Hall yesterday.

Mrs. Vanderbilt gave the dinner through the King's Daughters. The hostess mingled with her guests, making them feel at home. This is the twenty-second Thanksgiving dinner Mrs. Vanderbilt has given to the city's poor boys.

Goethals' Life One of Many Slides

BALTIMORE, Nov. 26.—"Life is one d—n slide after another" is the sign that greets visitors to Colonel Goethal's office in the Canal zone. That is the word brought back by Joseph T. Sinewald, Jr., associate in economic geology at Johns Hopkins University, just returned from a seven months' tour of South and Central America and the West Indies.

The sign originally was printed "Things" in place of "Slide."

Mrs. Niblo Loses $300 Coat to Thief

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Mrs. Fred Niblo, sister of George M. Cohan, is mourning the loss of a leopard-skin coat valued at $300.

Last night she was driven to a restaurant in the vicinity of the Astor Theatre. While the chauffeur went to get a lunch he left a boy to guard the car and the valuable coat. The driver returned to find the lad asleep and the coat gone.

RICE TO OPPOSE CHILDS IN NEWTON

In an open letter Abbott B. Rice, who was defeated for nomination for Mayor at the Newton primaries, announces that he will run independently. He said:

"The primaries of Newton have been held and Mayor Childs obtained the Republican nomination. The selection of Mayor Childs by a large Democratic vote as the nominee of the Republican party was expected, and though perfectly legal, no one concedes for a moment that he is the real choice of the Republican voters of Newton.

"As a candidate for Mayor advocating a business administration, feeling sure that the primaries would result as they did, I made no unusual effort to get out the real vote of those whom I believe to be behind me in my fight for good government. Since the primaries I have been urged over the phone, by letter and by personal request by people from all sections of the city to run as an independent candidate.

"Newton has about 8,000 voters. About 3,000 expressed themselves at the primaries. There are still 5,000 voters who have not registered their opinion. The glamor of office does not appeal to me in the least, but I am fighting for that principle in municipal government which is at the present time the issue in every city in the country, viz: to take politics out of civil affairs and run the city as a business proposition.

"Believing it to be my duty not to withdraw from the contest, but to stand by those who are deeply interested in good government for Newton, I have decided to oppose Mr. Childs and shall be a candidate for Mayor at the polls December 14."

Your Bronchial Tubes

When a cold settles in the bronchial tubes, with that weakening, hacking cough, immediate treatment is very important. The breath seems shorter because of mucous obstructions; usually fever is present, your head jars with every cough and your chest may ache. This is no time for experimenting or delay—you must get Scott's Emulsion at once to drive out the cold which started the trouble, and it will check the cough by aiding the healing process of the enfeebled membranes.

If you have any symptoms of bronchitis, or even a stubborn cold, always remember that Scott's Emulsion has been relieving this trouble for forty years. It is free from alcohol or drugs. Refuse substitutes.—Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.—Advertisement. 18-21 today to enlist the aid of Cardinal Gibbons and President Wilson.

Before he left New York, Mr. Ford had received assurances from eleven prominent Americans, including John Wanamaker and Chancellor David Starr Jordan of Leland Stanford University, that they would join him on December 4 on a peace mission to Europe on the steamship Oscar II.

Dr. Jordan's acceptance of the invitation to make the trip abroad was received at the Ford headquarters in the Biltmore Hotel, New York.

It is the object of Mr. Ford and his co-workers in behalf of peace to get the boys out of the trenches before Christmas."

Mr. Ford's secretary was swamped by the avalanche of mail which followed the announcement of the Ford peace plan. "It was regarded as certain that 400 of the foremost leaders of American thought and action could be pledged to make the trip to Europe, for a great international peace conference.

If Cardinal Gibbons is unable to make the trip, Mr. Ford will attempt to have him indorse the movement in such a way as to give it the approval and support of Roman Catholics throughout the United States.

Mr. Ford will call upon President Wilson, accompanied by Mrs. Philip Snowden, wife of a member of British Parliament, and Mrs. Rosika Schwimmer, a Hungarian peace advocate. The President will be asked to give the movement his official sanction.

WOMEN CALL UPON WILSON TO LEAD IN APPEALS FOR PEACE

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The desire of the women of America to aid in restoring peace to warring Europe found open expression here today. Representative women from nearly every State in the Union joined with representatives of the warring nations who are tired of war in a general movement designed to have President Wilson lead a concerted move by the neutral nations to try and secure a compromise before the war goes into another long Winter campaign.

As they gave utterance to their hopes and their prayers at a mass meeting in the Belasco Theatre here the avalanche of telegrams and letters from all over the United States urging the President to act without delay continued to pour into the White House.

So large is the number of telegrams that the French are making great strides in aeroplane building and are making greater and faster ones every week. I heard of a recent test of a very powerful one, in which four motors of 300 horse power each worked perfectly. Everything I saw pointed out the great demand for aeroplanes in the army and navy of this country, and the proper plan for adequate preparedness should include not less than 2,000 of them.

"They should be accompanied by a great corps of trained observers and these men must be more than pilots. A pilot is needed to manage the machine, but the observer, who must know what objects look like from above, and can only be trained by experience, is the great necessity of an effective aviation corps."

HAMMOND BELIEVES TRIP MAY CONVERT FORD TO PREPAREDNESS

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The people of Europe regard the general attitude in this country toward preparedness as one of the inexplicable results of the war, according to John Hays Hammond, Jr., who discussed last night the Ford peace ship and the duty of the United States in the present crisis. He has just returned from England and France, after spending two months there in conference with the naval and military authorities.

"No one in Europe can understand how there can be the necessity for a campaign for preparedness here," he said. "They seem to think that the calamity that has befallen England, France and Russia should be sufficient argument to show the people here that preparedness is an absolute necessity of national existence.

"The navies of England and Germany will be twice as strong at the end of next year, while that of the United States, even if the outlined plans are carried out, will only occupy the same relative position as it does now. Then there is the naval program being carried out by Japan. Their navy is being rapidly and greatly increased. All I can say is that it is significant to compare the programs of the United States and that country.

PEACE PLANS ABSURD.

"It seems needless to comment on the anti-preparedness or peace campaign being carried on by Henry Ford and Bryan. Two weeks at the front, anywhere in Europe—two weeks in England or France—would show them that their peace proposal is absurd.

"The people of Europe are thinking of anything but peace, and I believe that Mr. Ford's peace ship and peace envoys will get short shrift in every reception. The national spirits of the various countries of Europe have been aroused—of Germany, as well as the allies. There is no national spirit here, as the opposition of the preparedness campaign has shown. It seems as though only war will bring it out.

"The war is regarded in Europe as the greatest argument for preparedness, France and England feel that if they had been prepared, the war would never have taken place. It was only their condition of comparative unpreparedness that led Germany to make her attempt at world power. They have learned their lesson well during the long months of the war and will never again be found unprepared.

MAY CONVERT FORD.

"I would not be surprised to see Henry Ford return here and become one of the most ardent advocates for preparedness. He is a very intelligent man and the lesson he will learn will show him that his present position is both unpatriotic and wrong.

Report Cardinal Bears Peace Offe

By International News Service.

ROME, Nov. 26. — Reports that Cardinal von Hartmann, Archbishop of Cologne, had brought to Pope Benedict XV. tentative proposals of peace from Germany were persistently circulated today, following the arrival of the prelate and his request that he be granted an audience by the Pontiff.

On his way to Rome the Cardinal conferred in Switzerland with Prince von Buelow, former German ambassador to Italy. It has been reported on several occasions that Von Buelow would act as the official representative of Germany in making peace offers.

GERMANS READY TO BEAR FRESH PRIVATIONS

Boston American and London Times Exclusive Cable Service.

BERLIN (via London), Nov. 26.—Maximilian Harden devotes the current number of Zukunft to a general review under the title: Yearning for Peace."

He warns his readers there may be sooner or later air raids on Germany like the Zeppelin aids on England. Harden says:

"Will there be a separate peace with Russia I never believed in the conclusion of any separate peace and it is evident to politicians that a separate peace with Russia is more impossible than a separate peace with any other great power.

The article concludes: "None of Germany's enemies has been disarmed. None seems near a collapse and the mightiest of them, England, cannot honestly be said to have been seriously wounded. All believe in victory and are absolutely determined to secure victory by all possible means.

"A war of exhaustion—an end of which is beyond the range of human vision! This knowledge is in every brain and Germany's people will laugh at any fool who whispers that they have already made sacrifices enough.

"They will gladly submit to far shorter rations, for the German people desire only a worthy peace and will never diminish their alms.

"The war must not be shortened a day by fear of privations and the war must not last a day longer than is required by regard for the heritage of our fathers and the future of our children."

Confirm German Offer of Peace to the Serbians

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Reports that Germany offered to make a separate peace with Serbia were confirmed here today by the Serb legation.

The demands of Field Marshal von Mackensen were that Serbia give a free and uncontested passage to the Austrian and German troops, who would be allowed to retain the northeastern corner of Old Serbia and the most of New Serbia until after the war.

Prince Alexander of Serbia rejected the offer, sending a proud refusal to the German commander.

According to the Serbian legation in Paris, no offers of peace will be considered while there is a foreign foe on an inch of Serbia territory.

Allied Consuls in Persia Are Safe

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26.—A telegram from Teheran says that the British and Russian consuls and other members of the Russo-British colonies at Hamadan have arrived safely at Kasbin, ninety miles northwest of Teheran.

Several hundred gendarmes and persons opposed to the British and Russians recently attacked Hamadan, but did not enter the town itself.

ALLIES PLAN BIG DRIVE AGAINST BULGARIA

By PERCY THOMAS.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Preparations are being made by the allies for a great drive into Bulgaria as the most feasible way for the salvation of the Serbians.

A successful invasion of Bulgaria would have for its principal objects:

1—Subjugation of King Ferdinand's nation.

2—Cutting off the Orient railway to prevent direct communication between Berlin and Constantinople.

3—Retreat of Austria-German and Bulgarian troops from Serbia.

The report from Saloniea that Czar Nicholas of Russia had addressed a personal letter to Premier Pachitch of Serbia, promising to put a Russian army of invasion in Bulgaria within a week, was followed by a dispatch stating that British troops have been sent to a point near Ruk, from which position they could strike at the extreme southwestern corner of Bulgaria, which is regarded as a vulnerable spot.

A bombardment of the Bulgarian coast on the Black Sea and Aegean Sea by strong fleets of Russian and Anglo-French warships is imminent in a great effort to open up the way for the landing of troops.

It is known that great numbers of heavy Japanese guns and huge supplies of Japanese ammunition have been sent to Odessa to further the Russian operations.

German and Australian military writers claim the greater part of the Serbian army has been captured. They point to the capture of 17,000 Serbs at Mitrovitza and Prishtina as one of the big events of the Serbian campaign.

Recent unofficial reports that Monastir had been captured by the Bulgarians are explained by the following dispatch from Saloniki: "Monastir is still held by the Serbs, although a Bulgarian cavalry patrol reached the city last week.

MUST MOVE ON SOFIA, SAYS HANOTAUX

By GABRIEL HANOTAUX.

Former Foreign Minister of France.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The visit of Lord Kitchener and Denys Cochin to Athens has not been fruitless. It is stated that Greece is ready to accede to all of the allies' demands except participation in the war.

But what Greece seeks is to gain time, whereas time is working against us in the Balkans with fearful rapidity.

The Serbian army is almost exhausted. The curtain which she placed between the German, Austrian and Bulgarian armies and the French troops is growing thinner daily.

How long will it be before the Franco-British force has to bear the weight of the attacks of all the enemy armies?

It was important for us to go to Saloniea, but principally for the purpose of joining forces with the Serbians and succoring them. Unhappily, Serbia did not receive help in time. The junction of our forces was not obtained.

IMPORTANT QUESTION.

Now the question is whether we are safe at Saloniea. The retention of the port is important for the maintenance of the Mediterranean balance of power. But Saloniea cannot be defended at Saloniea, any more than Antwerp could be defended at Antwerp.

The fate of Saloniea will depend on whether the allies can cover it with a big army, and, using the port as a base, push northward a big offensive which, in general terms, can now only take the direction of Sofia.

Now that the Serbs are thrown back, Saloniea leads to Sofia or nowhere.

Sofia will be the eventual point of departure for the two diverged campaigns which Germany and Austria may undertake once they are complete masters of the Constantinople route.

One campaign would take them through Constantinople to Syria and Egypt. The other, whereof less has been heard in three days, would take Russia in the rear by her Black Sea territories. But with the allies driving on Sofia these plans would be nipped in the bud.

$60,000 MEN NEEDED.

Is there time for the allies to repair the mistake of not going to Serbia's help last July?

Can we constitute a new southern front; first, to hold the Bulgarians in check, and then to throw them back on Sofia, even if the Austro-German armies help them?

For such an enterprise a minimum of from 300,000 to 400,000 troops is needed.

After the speech of Italian Minister Orlando we are justified in believing the allies have renounced the system of separate action. Italy can afford to send 100,000 troops to Saloniea to save the Balkans. Gallipoli, Egypt and France can rush sufficient reinforcements to constitute the present minimum of the allied army.

But let there be no mistake. If the expeditionary corps, based on Saloniea, is not rapidly strengthened to act immediately, its presence on a front so soft threatens us with the gravest consequences.

A Fascinating New Love Story of the European War

By EARL DERR BIGGERS, Author of "Seven Keys to Baldpate," and Robert Welles Ritchie

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

JANE GERSON, on her first trip to Paris to buy gowns for a New York store, is aided in a baggage trouble at Calais by a man who introduces himself as Captain Woodhouse of the English signal service, returning to duty in Egypt. He warns her of war. She laughs. At Paris he entrains for Berlin, instead of going to Egypt.

On his way from Egypt to Gibraltar, the false Woodhouse trails Capper to Berlin and the Wilhelmstrasse, the German spy machine, plots to aid Germany. Through Louise, its feminine member, Billy Capper, an outcast spy, is given the number 1932 and money to go to Malta, believing he is to do great things. Then Louise meets Captain Woodhouse in Berlin and tells him of a German plan to have Capper's number stolen and Capper fall into English hands, to suffer death as a spy, while the real Wilhelmstrasse spy, unsuspected, reaches Alexandria. Woodhouse is the real spy. At Alexandria he is to impersonate the genuine Captain Woodhouse, who will come there on his way from Egypt to Gibraltar.

Woodhouse, the spy, gets Capper's number in Marseilles, ships him to Malta and proceeds to Alexandria. Germany declares war on Russia. At Alexandria the false Woodhouse has just convinced one, Dr. Koch, that he is from the Wilhelmstrasse when the Doctor's bell rings.

CHAPTER XII.
Another 1932.

THEIR talk was desultory during the next minutes. The doctor seemed restless under the suspense of a pending announcement as to the late visitor. Finally came a soft tapping on the hidden door behind Woodhouse.

The latter heard the doctor exchange whispers with the Numidian in the hallway. Finally, "Show him into the waiting-room," Koch ordered. He came back to where the captain was sitting, a puzzled frown between his eyes.

"An Englishman, Caesar says—an Englishman, who insists on seeing me—very important."

Koch bit the end of one stubby thumb in hurried thought. He suddenly whipped open the door of one of the instrument cases, pulled out a stethoscope, and hooked the two little black receivers into his ears. Then he turned to Woodhouse.

"Quick! Off with your coat and open your shirt. You are a patient; I am just examining you when interrupted. This may be one of these clumsy English secret-service men, and I might need your alibi," Koch's gruff answer.

"Young man, you're talking madness. You're talking to a loyal British subject. I have authority from your Wilhelmstrasse or your number. If I did not think you were drunk I'd have you held here, to be turned over to the military as a spy. Now, go, before I change my mind."

Again the querulous protestation of Capper, met by the doctor's pert, empty order. The captain heard the front door close. A long wait, and Dr. Koch's black face, with the surmounting eyes of thick glass, appeared at a parting of the folding doors.

Woodhouse, the tiny thermometer still sticking insipidly from his mouth, met the baldish stare of those two ovals of glass with a coldly casual glance. He removed the little thermometer from between his lips and read it with a smile, as if that were a part of playing a game. Still the ghastly stare from the glass eyes over the breathing beneath—searching.

"Well," Woodhouse said lightly, "no need of an alibi, after all."

Dr. Koch stepped into the room with the lightness of a cat, walked to a desk drawer at one side, and fumbled there for a second, his back to his guest. When he turned he held a short-barreled automatic at his hip; the muzzle covered the shirt-sleeved man in the chair.

"Much need—for an alibi—from you! Dr. Koch crooked his voice airy and flat with rage. "Much need, Mr. Nineteen Thirty-two. Commence your explanation immediately—for this minute my temptation is very strong—very strong—to shoot you for the dog you are."

CHAPTER XIII.
Thin Ice.

"IS this—ah, customary?" Woodhouse twiddled the tiny mercury tube between his fingers and looked unflinchingly at the small round mouth of the automatic. "Do you make a practice of consulting a friend with a revolver at your hip?"

"You heard—what, was said in there!" Koch's forehead was curiously ridged and flushed with much blood.

"Did you ask me to listen? Surely, my dear Doctor, you have provided doors that are sound-proof. If I may suggest, isn't it about time that you explain this—this melodrama?"

The captain's voice was cold; his lips were drawn to a thin line. Koch's big head moved from side to side with a gesture curiously like that of a bull about to charge, but knowing not where his enemy stands. He blurted out:

"For your information, if you did not overhear: An Englishman comes just now to address me familiarly as of the Wilhelmstrasse. He comes to say he was sent to report to me; that his number in the Wilhelmstrasse is nineteen thirty-two, remember; and I am to give him orders. Please explain that before I pull this trigger."

"He showed you his number—his ticket, then?" Woodhouse added this parenthetically.

"The man said his ticket had been stolen from him some time after he left Paris—stolen from the head of his cane, where he had it concealed. But the number, nineteen thirty-two." The doctor voiced this last decoyingly.

"You have, of course, had this man followed," the other put in. "You take me for a fool, to suppose I came alone?"

"Caesar was after him before he left the garden gate—naturally. But—"

Woodhouse held up an interrupting hand.

"Pardon me, Doctor Koch; did you get this fellow's name?"

"He refused to give it—said I wouldn't know him anyway."

"Was he an underaized man, very thin, sparse hair, and a face showing dissipation?" Woodhouse put on, "Nervous, jerky way of talking—fingers to his mouth, as if to feel his words as they come out—brandy or some breath? Can't you guess who he was?"

"I guess nothing."

"The target!"

At the word Louise had used in describing Capper in Woodhouse, Koch's face underwent a change. He lowered his pistol.

"Ach!" he said. "The man they are to arrest. And you have the number!"

"That was Capper's number, memory of the Belgian office—kicked in the drunkenness. One time he sold out for downing Street in the matter of the Lord Fisher letters; you remember the scandal. Now he's come to light—his majesty, the Kaiser's Kiel speech referring to them. He is a good stalking horse."

Koch's suspicion had left him. Still gripping the automatic he sat down on the edge of the operating chair, regarding the other man respectfully.

The Captain Spoke With Displeasure.

"Come—come, Doctor Koch; you and I can not continue longer at cross-purposes." The captain spoke with terse displeasure. "This man Capper showed you nothing to prove his claims, yet you come back to this room and threaten my life on the strength of a drunkard's bare word. What his mission is you know; how he got his number, which is the number I have given you on my ticket from the Wilhelmstrasse—you understand how such things are managed. I happen to know, however, because it was my business to know, that Capper left Marseilles for Malta aboard La Vendee four days after we had expected to go beyond Malta."

Koch caught him up: "But the fellow told me his boat didn't stop at Malta—was warned by wireless to proceed at all speed to Alexandria, for fear of the Breslau, known to be in the Adriatic." Woodhouse spread out his hands with a gesture of finality.

"There you are: Capper finds himself stranded in Alexandria, knows somehow of your position as a man of the Wilhelmstrasse—things cannot be hid from the underground workers—comes here to explain himself to you and excuse himself for the loss of his number. Is there anything more to be said, except that we must keep a close watch on him?"

The physician rose and paced the room, his hands clasped behind his back. The automatic bobbed against the tails of his long coat as he walked. After a minute's restless striding, he broke his step before the desk, jerked open the drawer, and dropped the weapon in it. Back to where Woodhouse was sitting he stalked and held out his right hand stiffly.

"Your pardon, Number Nineteen Thirty-two! For my suspicion I apologize. But, you see my position—a very delicate one." Woodhouse rose, grasped the doctor's hand and wrung it heartily.

"And now," he said, "to keep this affair from getting into print. Princess Mary sails and I aboard her as Captain Woodhouse of Wady Halfa. The man might trip us all up."

"He will not be sure of that," Koch growled, helping Woodhouse into his coat and leading the way to the folding doors. "I will have Caesar attend to him the minute he comes back to report where Capper is supposed. Until when" the captain asked, pausing at the gate, to which Koch escorted him.

"Here tomorrow night at nine," the doctor answered, and the gate shut behind him. Captain Woodhouse, alone under the shadowing palms of Queen's Terrace, drew in a long breath, shook his shoulders as if starting for the station and the midnight train to Alexandria.

CHAPTER XIV.
A Ferret.

CONSIDER the mental state of Mr. Billy Capper as he sank into a seat on the midnight suburban train to Ramleh to Alexandria.

Even to the guard, unused to particular observation of his passengers save as to their possible propensity for trying to beat their fares, the bundle of clothes surmounted by a rusty brown bowler which huddled under the sickly light of the second-class carriage bespoke either a candidate for a plunge off the quay or a misdoer returning from his watery sailing. But the eyes of the man dedicated to the destruction of Egypt was in them, albeit the merciless quality that refused an alternative when fate has its victim pushed into a corner.

So submerged was Capper under the flood of his own bitter cogitations that he had not noticed the other two passengers boarding the train at the little tiled station—a tall, quietly dressed white man and a Numidian with a cloak thrown over his white livery. The latter had faded like a shadow into the third-class carriage behind the one in which Capper rode.

Here was Capper—poor old Hard-luck Billy Capper—floored again, and just when the tide of bad fortune was on the turn; so ran the minor strain of self pity under the brown bowler. A failure once more, and through no fault of his own. No, no!

Hadn't he been ready to deliver the goods? Hadn't he come all the way down here from Berlin, faithful to his pledge to Louise, the girl in the Wilhelmstrasse, ready and willing to embark on the important mission of which he was to be told by Doctor Emil Koch? And what happens?

Koch turns him into the street like a dog; threatens to have him before the military as a spy if he doesn't make himself scarce. Koch refuses even to admit he'd ever heard of the Wilhelmstrasse. Clever beggar! A jolly keen eye he's got for his own skin; won't take a chance on being betrayed into the hands of the English, even when he ought to see that a chap's honest when he comes and tells a straight story about losing that silly little bit of paper with his working number on it.

What difference if he can't produce the ticket when he has the number put on the tip of his tongue, and is willing to risk his own life to give that number to a stranger?

Back upon the old perplexity that had kept Capper's brain on strain ever since the first day aboard La Vendee—who had lifted his ticket, and when was it done? The man recalled, for the hundredth time, his awaking aboard the French liner—what a horror that first morning was, with the ratty little surgeon feeding a fellow aromatic spirits of ammonia like porridge!

Capper, in this mood of detached review, saw himself painfully stretching out his arm from his bunk to grasp his stick the very first minute he was alone in the stateroom; the crooked handle comes off under his tugging, and the white wisp of paper is stuck in the hollow of the stick. Blank paper!

Safe as it could be had been that little square of paper Louise had given him with his expense money, from the day he left Berlin until—when? To be sure, he had treated himself a little of the good life in Paris, and, maybe, in Marseilles—but his brain had been clear every minute.

Oh, Capper would have sworn to that! The whole business of the disappearance of his Wilhelmstrasse ticket and the substitution of the blank was simply another low trick the Capper luck had played on him.

No End to the Misery of It.

The train rushed through the dark toward the distant prickly coral bed of lights, and the whirligig of black despair churned under the train bowler. No beginning, no end to the misery of it.

Each new attempt to force a little light of hope into the blackness of his plight fetched up at the same dead end. Louise, Billy Capper, hired by the Wilhelmstrasse, after having been booted out of the secret service of England and Belgium—given a show for his white alley—and he couldn't move a hand to earn his new salary. Nor could he go back to Berlin, even though he declared with confidence born of the stolen ticket; Berlin was no place for an Englishman right now, wanting to get there.

No, he was in the backwash again—this time in this beastly hard-luck city of Alexandria, and with—how much was it now?—with a beggarly fifteen pounds between himself and the beach.

Out of the ruck of Capper's sad reflections lay odd persistent call began to make itself heard before ever the Ramleh train rumbled into the Alexandria station.

That elusive country of fountains, limes and rose dreams which can only be approached through the peck of a bottle's spread itself before him alluringly, inviting him to forgetfulness. And Capper answered the call.

From the railroad station, by the his course through narrow villainous streets down to the district on Rue Chanab, Cassar, Doctor Koch's man. The Numidian trailed like a panther, stinking from cover to cover, bending his body as the big rat does to the accommodations of the trail's blinds.

Once Capper found himself in a blind alley, turned and strode out of it just in time to bump heavily into the interested observer. There stood a hem of the Numidian's cloak was lifted to screen his face, but not before the sharp eyes of the Englishman had seen and recognized it.

A tart smile curled the corners of Capper's mouth as he passed on down the bazaar-lined street to the Turkish Ramleh to Alexandria, at the next corner. So old Koch was taking precautions, eh? Well, Capper, for one, could hardly blame him; who wouldn't, under the circumstances?

The Tavern of Thermopylae was built for the Billy Cappers of the world—a place of genial devility where every man's gold was better than his name, and no man asked more than to see the color of the stranger's money.

Here was gathered as sweet a company of assassins as one could find from Port Said to Honmoku, all gentle to fellows of their craft under the freemasonry of hard liquor. Greeks, Levantines, Liverpool scallywags from the Cape, leech-eyed Finns from a Russian's gunboat, canned ivory runners from the forbidden lands of the African back country—all that mass Pierre and Sidon Infamous in the Testament police records was represented there.

CHAPTER XV.
What Capper Saw

CAPPER called for an absinth dripper and established himself in a deserted corner of the smoke-filled room. There was music, of sorts, and singing; women whose eyes told strange stories, and whose tongues jumped nimbly over three or four languages; there, their companions-to-ship to those who needed company with their drink. But Billy Capper ignored the music and closed his ears to the sirens; he knew who was his best cup companion.

The thin green blood of the wormwood drip-dripped down on to the ice in Capper's glass, coloring it with a rime like moss. He watched it, fascinated, and when he sipped the cold stuff it was like a new draught of life. Sips—sip; a soothing numbness came to the tired nerves. Sip—sip; the clouds of doubt and self-pity pressing down on his brain began to shred away. He saw things clearly now; everything as sharp and clear as the point of an icicle.

He reviewed with new seat his recent experiences, from the night he met Louise in the Cafe Riche up to his interview with Dr. Koch. Louise—that girl with the face of a fine animal and a heart as cold as carved ivory; why had she been so willing to intercede for Billy Capper with her superiors in the Wilhelmstrasse and procure him a number and a mission to Alexandria?

A Paris guidebook regarding the Anglo-Belgian understanding? But she paid for that. The deal was fairly closed with three hundred marks. Did Louise go further and list him in the Wilhelmstrasse spy? Was the question of her heart, or did memory's tricks? Capper smiled wryly over his absinth. There was no goodness in Louise's heart, and the strongest memory she had was how nearly Billy Capper had dragged her down with him in the scandal of the Lord Fisher letters.

Under the thin green blood of the wormwood cleared the mind—made it leap to logical reasoning!

Capper laughed like the philosopher he was just discovered the absolute of life's futility. The ticket—by Jove, that was the point—the ticket which Louise had procured for him; Louise wanted that for other purposes than Capper's; Louise meant to obtain it.

Capper wanted it before he could arrive at Malta—and she got it before he left Marseilles. Even Louise, the false, had proved unequal to discounting the Double O on the wheel—fate's percentage in every game; she could not know the Vendee would be warned from lingering at Malta because of the exigency of war, and that Billy Capper would reach Alexandria after all.

The green logic in the glass carried Capper along with mathematical exactness of deduction. As he sipped, his mind became a thing detached and, looking down from somewhere high above earth, reviewed the blundering courses of Billy Capper's body from Berlin to Alexandria—the poor deluded body of a dupe.

With this certitude of logic came the beginnings of resolve. Vague at first and intangible, then, helped by the absinth to focus, was this new determination. Capper nursed it, elaborated on it, took pleasure in forecasting its outcome, and viewing himself in the new light of a humble hero. It was near morning, and the Tavern of Thermopylae was well-nigh deserted when Capper paid his score and blundered through the early morning crowd of mixed races to his hotel. His legs were quite drunk, but his mind was coldly and acutely sober.

"Very drunk, master," was the report Caesar, the Numidian, delivered to Doctor Koch in the Ramleh villa. "The doctor, believing Caesar to be a competent judge, chuckled in his beard. Caesar was called off from the trail.

The Summer Home Was Unoccupied.

Across the street from Doctor Koch's home on Queen's terraces was the summer home of a major of fusiliers, whose station was up the Nile. But the Summer's villa was unoccupied, the major had hurried his family back to England at the first muttering of war clouds, and he himself had to stick by his regiment up in the doubtful Sudan country.

Like Doctor Koch's place, the high wall, over which the fronds of palm's yard were surrounded by a big palms and flowered shrubs draped themselves. The unrest villa, aside from the Kochs across the street, was a hundred yards away. At night an ant light, set about thirty feet from Doctor Koch's gate, marked all the road thereabouts with sharp blocks of light and shadow.

One lying close atop the wall about the major's grounds, screened by the palms and the heavy branches of some night-blooming ghost flower, could command a perfect view of Doctor Koch's gateway without being himself visible.

At least, so Billy Capper found it on the night following his visit to the doctor's Alexandria and his subsequent communion with himself at the green of absinth dripper.

Almost with the failing of the dark, Capper had stepped off the train at Ramleh, and, terrified himself by a boat down the canal that passed behind the grounds of the villa, made a reconnoitring, discovered that the tangle of wildwood about the house was not penetrated by a watchman, and had so achieved his position of vantage on the wall directly opposite the gateway of No. 22. He was stretched flat.

The route to spaces between the dry fingers of a palm leaf he could command the gate and the gate and the road on either side. Few pedestrians passed below him; an automobile or two pulled by to halt in the main Queen's terrace was deserted and quiet except for it. It was a lonely vigil. Capper had no reliance except his instinct of a spy familiar with the work to assure that he would be rewarded for his pains.

Some sixth sense in him had prompted him to come thither, sure in the promise that the night would not be misspent. A clock somewhere off in the odorous dark struck the hour twice, and Capper fidgeted. The hard stone he was lying on cramped him.

The sound of footsteps on the flagged walk aroused momentary interest. He looked out through his screen of green and saw a tall well-knit figure of a man approach the opposite gate, stop and ring the bell. Instantly Capper tingled with the hunting fever of his trade.

In the strong light from the arc he could study minutely the face of the man at the gate—smoothly shaven, slightly gaunt and with thin lips above a strong chin. It was a striking face—one easily remembered. The gate opened; beyond it Capper saw, for an instant, the white fingers of the Numidian he had bumped into at the alley's mouth. The gate closed on both.

Another weary hour for the ferret on the wall, then something happened that was reward enough for cramped muscles and taut nerves. An automobile purred up to the gate, out of it hopped two men, while a third tilted over like one drunk, remaining on the rear seat of the tonneau. One rang the bell. The two behind the car got Ridgett anxiously for it to be opened.

Capper put not so much heed to them as to the half-reclining figure in the machine. It was in strong light. Capper saw, with a leap of his heart, that the man in the machine was clothed in the khaki service uniform of the British army—an officer's uniform he judged by the trimness of it to be Britain's. Though he could not see the shoulder straps. The unconscious man was slumbered on one side of his face was darkened by a broad trickle of blood from the scalp. He was not dead, though, for above the few hurried words between the Numidian and the two who waited. All three united in lifting an inert figure from the car and carrying it quickly through the gate. Consumed with the desire to follow them into the labyrinth of the doctor's yard, yet not daring, Capper remained plastered to the wall.

M'ADOO HAS TAX PLAN TO RAISE DEFENCE FUND

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, to pay the cost of national defence, proposes increasing the rate on incomes and reducing exemptions under the present law. He believes the $112,806,314 needed can be raised without unduly burdening the people.

"The resources and wealth of this country are so great, and are increasing so rapidly, that the needs of the government for its normally growing expenditures and for the carrying out of the larger program for national defence can readily be met," he explained.

"Merely as suggestions, I would say that consideration may well be given to increasing the rates of taxation on individual and corporate incomes and of reducing the exemption under the present law of $3,000 for single and $4,000 for married persons to $2,000 and $3,000 respectively. The war-tax could begin at $10,000 or $15,000, instead of $20,000, as provided at present.

"In addition to any increases that may be made in the corporation and individual income taxes, a tax could be imposed on such products as gasoline, crude and refined oils, horsepower of automobiles and other internal combustion engines and various other articles not necessary to mention. These taxes would be widely diffused and scarcely felt."

Secretary McAdoo explained that while the proposed army and navy appropriations in 1917 would represent an increase for preparedness considerably in excess of the $53,000,000 referred to in his statement, a part of the expenditures authorized actually would not be spent during that year. He estimates that $93,000,000 will cover the increase for which additional revenues must be found by the next Congress.

LOVE IS WOMAN'S GRAND SUCCESS IN LIFE, SAYS AMAZAR

Mlle. Elvira Amazar, of Siberia, who makes the acquaintance of Bostonians tonight in "Boheme," at the Opera House.

"There is but one success for women in life, and that is love," says Mlle. Elvira Amazar, who hails from Siberia, and who is to make the acquaintance of Boston opera-goers tonight, when she will impersonate the fun-loving Musetta in Puccini's "Boheme" at the Opera House.

"Whether women will eventually vote or not; whether women will in days to come manage industries and direct commerce is not half so important as the question whether men will love them, when equality becomes an established fact, as much as they love them now," says the pretty young singer, who confesses to but twenty-two summers despite her seriousness. "We in Russia are also fighting for woman's emancipation; but with us conditions are different, and I am certain that, could the Russian woman become the idol an American woman is usually to an American man, she would believe herself as much a victor as it is given to a human being to be.

"Of course, I am not in a position to judge anything that is happening in your country, though I know of the terrific struggle your women are making for the right to vote. I wish they would win, for it would settle a problem, namely, the one as to whether or not in winning political rights women lose their power over men through love.

"I know of the proofs cited in support of the theory that neither family nor love are in any way affected by the woman's possession of the ballot; but a human being must either pet or be petted in order to be happy, and I wonder what role the women are to play in relation to petting, that is, are they to pet or be petted? If the second, all's well; if the first, I fear they will soon tire of the right to vote. I know I would."

At "Boheme" Bostonians will also make the acquaintance of Lucca Botta, of the Metropolitan Opera House, whom New York has declared to be one of the greatest lyric tenors of the present generation on his first appearance there last year.

Mr. Botta has won his operatic spurs at the La Scala, Milan, and although a very young man he has an operatic experience of a wide range and has won laurels the world over.

"I can say without exaggeration that in Mr. Botta, Bostonians will make the acquaintance of one of the greatest lyric tenors of the age," says Director Rabinoff. "Rodolfo is one of his best roles, as is that of the Duke in "Rigoletto," in which opera he will be heard on Saturday matinee of next week."

COMPANY GIVES FINE PRODUCTION OF PUCCINI'S "TOSCA"

The Boston Grand Opera Company's "Tosca" was an intensely artistic production of the Puccini work, sung with fine feeling and in every way a performance not soon to be forgotten. "Tosca" must needs be fiery, passionate and with much of the theatric in the singing.

Mme. Fremstad of deserved Wagnerian fame, sang the role of Floria Tosca, her first appearance in the part in Boston. Here is a conception differing much from that of others who have been heard in the part, but she is withal a pleasing heroine. Fremstad conceives the Roman singer as a woman possessed of charm, strong in her love and steadfast. Fremstad's is not a Tosca voice, but her rendering is fairly satisfactory.

Zanatello was the outstanding figure in the opera. His Cavaradossi is simply great, and superb as he was two years ago. Zenatello has come back before Boston audiences with added splendor. He is an ardent, soulful lover, great in Mario's lighter moments as in the tragedy of the character.

Mme. Pavlowa and her Russian ballet danced the "Egyptian Ballet" exquisitely.

BIG GUNS SMASH THE FORTS OF GORIZIA

By CAMILLO CIANFARRO.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

ROME, Nov. 26.—Italian guns mounted upon captured position on Monte Michele are battering to pieces the defences of Gorizia. The successes won by the forces of General Cadorna in the last three days are declared by Italian military experts to have rendered untenable several of the main forts defending Gorizia.

They predict the Austrians will be forced to evacuate almost the entire Isonzo front within forty-eight hours. Unofficial reports from Milan stating that Gorizia has been captured were received last night, but it was stated at the War Office today that these reports were premature.

A general feeling of elation was apparent in official circles, however. This was taken as indicative that an announcement of a great victory was expected.

Italian military aviators reconnoitering above the Austrian positions on the Isonzo front have reported that fires are raging in the ruins of Gorizia. The heavy fire upon the town by the Italian gunners has forced almost the entire civil population to flee, though some inhabitants still remain, hoping that their homes will be saved.

TEUTONS EXTENDING THEIR ACTIVITIES IN MONTENEGRO CAMPAIGN

By International News Service.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—With the capture of Mitrovitza and Prisilina and the junction of the Austro-German and Bulgarian armies, the first phase of the campaign in the Balkans is regarded here by military men as having been completed.

The second phase has opened with an extension of Austro-German activities into Montenegro.

An Austro-Hungarian army has invaded King Nicholas' little mountain kingdom through the valley of the Lim river near Bijlopoljie, cutting off the Montenegrin forces in the north from a junction with the Montenegrins fighting on the northeastern frontier of Albania.

Violent rear-guard actions are being fought with the retreating Serbians southwest of the Ritnica River, near Montenegrin frontier.

The German war office in its official report today stated that the Serbian rear-guards that tried to stem the advance of Field Marshal von Mackensen's army were driven back. Field Marshal von Mackensen was mentioned by name in the report on Balkan operations for the first time in many days. It had been reported he had gone to the Dardanelles.

The subjection of Montenegro will prevent the retreat of the Serbians into that country.

It was indicated by the Austrian War Office that the German and Austro-Hungarian armies are bent upon the occupation of the whole Albanian coast line to prevent a union between any Italian forces that might have landed and the Anglo-French and Serbian troops.

If the German allies are successful in their drive along the Adriatic littoral it will compel the Serbians to abandon Scutari as their capital.

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT ANY BREAKFAST

Wash poison from system each morning and feel fresh as a daisy.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of nervous wrecks, "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons. Thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds, and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which costs but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.—Adv.

ALLIES CHECK 3 ASSAULTS BY TURKS

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Late dispatches from the Dardanelles indicate that the Turks have been repulsed by the allies after a three-days' battle.

Guns newly arrived from Germany are said to have aided the Turks.

The attacks were directed against a series of trenches which the British captured a week previously, and for intensity and ferocity the drives made by the Turks have not been excelled since the campaign on the peninsula began.

The Turks began with a bombardment in which guns of large calibre were used. Following this three fierce attacks were launched in succession, the Turks advancing with the utmost abandon.

By effective reconnoitering of the allies' aeroplanes they were able to anticipate this coming offensive and supports from the French section of the lines were rushed up to support the British section and met their enemy with a withering fire.

Nervous Periodical Headaches

Succumb to Anti-Kamnia Tablets

This trouble commonly called "sick headache," is said to be due to the retention of urea in the system. Often it is stated that a poor condition of the blood is a cause of these headaches, or that it is a nervous condition; and in certain cases, no doubt this is true.

Where treatment is demanded, it is more for the pain than anything else, and Dr. A. F. Schnelle, Smith of Louisville, has found Anti-Kamnia Tablets to give prompt and satisfactory relief. "Relief should be insisted upon," he says, "and the patient should go to bed, darken the room, and all the attendants and family should be as quiet as possible. An emetic will sometimes shorten the attack. The bowels should be kept open with "Autolax," a pot bath and a thorough rub-down with a coarse towel often give grateful relief. Two Anti-Kamnia Tablets when the first signs appear, will usually prevent the attack. During an attack, one tablet every hour or two will shorten the attack and relieve the usual nausea and vomiting." These tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A. K. Tablets. They are also unexcelled for nervous headaches, neuralgia and all pains.

DEATH WARRANT IN BABY'S DEFECTIVENESS

Dr. Haiselden Describes His Impressions on Seeing Bollinger Weakling.

HERE is the second installment of Dr. Harry J. Haiselden's remarkable book discussing the now world-famous case of Baby Bollinger, whose mental and physical deformities at birth were the same as a death warrant.

You read Wednesday the gripping first installment which he called his "Foreword." It held you, to the last sentence. Go on with his thrilling narrative in today's first chapter.

By HARRY J. HAIBELDEN, M. D.
Copyrighted, 1915, by Harry J. Haiselden, M. D.

CHAPTER I.

"Doomed to Death!"

On the morning of Friday, November 12, I was aroused from my bed at 4 a. m. by the persistent ringing of my front door bell. Throwing on a dressing gown I hurried down and admitted two persons—one of them a woman whom I immediately recognized as Dr. Climena Serviss, a member of my profession with whom I have been closely associated for years.

My other caller was a man—short and spare, muffled up in a black coat. What attracted my particular notice was his eyes. If I ever saw a look of utter horror in the eyes of a man it lurked in those of the one who stood upon my doorstep on this chill November morning. There was horror and there was pity and there was a dumb appeal.

"Come in, Dr. Serviss," I said. "Tell me what is troubling you."

We entered the parlor. As I recall now I don't think we sat down.

DOCTOR ON VERGE OF TEARS.

Dr. Serviss began immediately. I have seen her before in more or less trained circumstances, but I had never seen her in such a condition of nerve. She actually seemed on the verge of bursting into tears.

"I have just delivered a child for a little woman over in the hospital," she began. Then she broke off suddenly. The man turned and gazed out of the window.

"I believe it is an imbecile," suddenly ejaculated my old friend. "Won't you please come over and look at it—please?".

I asked her for more particulars.

"I have attended this little woman on three other occasions," said Dr. Serviss, striving to control herself. "All of them were over at the German-American Hospital. The first three resulted in such beautiful children! They were all so well formed—so healthy—so active!"

There came a queer little noise from the man gazing out of the window—a queer choking noise. The man was sobbing.

"This is Allan Bollinger," said Dr. Serviss.

The man gave his head a little jerk—he did not look around.

"They were all typical youngsters of good, healthy parents," continued Dr. Serviss. "They come of good stock."

BABE A "LITTLE OLD MAN."

"But now, this morning, the baby that was just born—well, you can see at a glance that it is deformed. It is a little old man—all blue. Its eyes—the moment I looked into its eyes I was positive that I had brought an imbecile into the world."

Then in her first words Dr. Servius voiced the sinister suspicion that was later confirmed by all of my medical knowledge, backed by twenty years of experience, much of it in just such and cases this. I was given the first hint that this most important organ of all, the seat of all that goes to make up a normal, happy, healthy, thinking human being—was blighted at the very beginning.

That lightning intuition of this trained and seasoned woman doctor told the whole story.

From that instant Baby Bollinger—the infant son of Allan and Anna Bollinger—was doomed.

What its doom was to be none of us then knew. Later on I gained absolute certainty of lack of brain development in this unfortunate child—sufficient to indicate that it never could be assured of even ordinary animal intelligence.

Then I heard the earliest suggestion of what was later to be the very basis of the Baby Bollinger case, which within a few days was to spread all over the country like a fire, or a contagion, and torture the minds of thinking men and women.

"Doctor"—and the woman's voice now dropped to a pleading note—"if we find that this child is hopelessly defective—if we find that it is lacking in capacity to enjoy even the tiniest crumbs of existence here in the world, do we have to operate on it? Can't we let it die?"

Mr. Bollinger turned and gazed at me with the horror still in his eyes. And now I knew the cause of that horror—the greatest horror that a man can know.

He had looked into the eyes of his newborn son and found him a monster.

"Does it have to live?"

LIFE TRAGEDY IN FEW WORDS

Those were the first words I ever heard from Allan Bollinger. They were the most tragic words I have ever heard from the lips of any man. The greatest tragedies of the ages contain no phrase that ever went straight to the bottom of my heart and spread a chill there so swiftly as those simple words of the father of Baby Bollinger.

I looked once more into the kindly gray eyes of my old friend. Tears were streaming from them. She was a doctor no longer—just a woman who had looked upon unutterable sufferings and her heart was aching.

There was many a heartache in the days that followed, but I always shall remember that first scene in my living room. The choking, horror-stricken father and this weeping woman of science, whom I had seen cool and collected and sure of herself on the firing line time after time!

"Just as soon as you can, please come to the hospital and see the baby!" she said after a few minutes. "Come and see it; examine it with care; study it—and then give us your decision. I have already talked with the father—and the mother.

"They are agreed. If the child does not give promise of growing to healthy, normal manhood—they won't want it to live. They prefer that death should have it now, before they begin to love it."

Then, returning to something like her old self, the doctor rapidly sketched the superficial defects of the baby just born. She told me that there was one defect which unless remedied immediately would result in the child's death.

QUESTION THAT LASTED TWENTY YEARS.

I had been thinking swiftly—almost furiously. It was a question I had pondered many times before. In fact, for twenty years I had brooded over it in my mind. I almost thought it would drive me mad.

This question was whether or not I had the right to use my surgical skill to encourage a life that was hopelessly blighted.

My brain was whirling as I hastily donned my clothes and joined Dr. Servius and the father and walked to the hospital, a block away from my home. The old fight was on again.

But of one thing I was sure this time. I would come to a definite decision. This time I would act as my conscience dictated. And I would abide by that decision once it was made. There would be no dodging this time.

I learned other things from Dr. Servius. I learned that the birth of the child was a remarkably easy one—almost free from pain. Mrs. Bollinger had come to the hospital the night before at 9 o'clock. All through the night she had rested easily. And then, shortly before dawn, the child came into the world.

One glance and Dr. Servius ordered it removed so that the mother's eyes would not rest upon it. Thinking that all was well, she had gone to sleep—happy in the birth of a son.

Two sons and two daughters she had now. She even smiled in the sweet and restful sleep that came to her mercifully at this hour. She slept so because she had not seen the newborn babe. It has been permitted to look upon its poor, maimed, malformed, twisted body, instead of which there would have been hours of horror.

HORROR FATAL TO MOTHER.

The horror that turned the father cold and sent him quivering and sick to his work that morning might have easily have killed the mother in her delicate condition.

But she had not been permitted to look upon her son.

And she never did see her baby. Baby Bollinger lived and died without coming under the mother's eyes.

I first went to the mother. I found her recovering swiftly from her mercifully brief ordeal. I talked to her and she answered my questions quietly and intelligently. The father was there, too.

They told me—the two of them together—one supplying a word when the other hesitated—they told me their willingness to make the greatest of all sacrifices if I should decide that it would be best for their child to do so.

We were in Room 441—a large sunny room on the top floor of the hospital. There were some yellow flowers in a vase on the dressing table. They added cheerfully to the light breeze that came through the partially opened window.

I looked at these flowers and thought how carefully they had been cultivated—how exact was the science that had made them large and beautiful—almost perfect. It was the science of selection. They had lived and grown beautiful because thousands of less perfect blooms had died. Somehow that thought was helpful to me as I listened to this father and mother—natural and loving parents, as you will learn later—rather calmly discussing whether or not their child was to be permitted to die.

LAUDS BRAVERY OF MOTHER.

Mrs. Bollinger I found to be a comely little woman with large dark eyes—kind mother's eyes. How brave a little woman this was I to learn later, when I came to her with the death verdict for her son.

But now they were asking me to go ahead and make my examination. They wanted to be sure. They appealed to all of my science, all of my training, all of my knowledge in my profession.

As I looked from one to the other I noted a strong difference between the two.

In the eyes of the woman there was still hope. She had not seen the child. She still believed that it had the right to live; that my medical skill would be sufficient to lead it through its dark crisis. She believed that within a few days or a few weeks I would bring to her a tiny bundle and lay it in her arms and say:

"There is your child. You may go home now. It will be a fine man some day. Do not fear."

That was what I read in the eyes of the woman.

I gazed again into the eyes of the m...

"Death Instead of Life"

I am a lover of life—lusty, vigorous, bounding life. I love nothing better than the quick rush of blood into the cheek of healthy, normal, happy people. My own life I have devoted to saving life. I love life too well to toy with it for the purpose of adding to my professional reputation. I have always been in love with life. Life I have always regarded as a beautiful, wonderful thing—a great privilege and a blessing.

My greatest joy is to give life, to save life; to restore life—to set the feet of happy, healthy humans springing along the glad pathway of life.

But under that little coverlet, worked carefully by the fingers of the mother, I found not Life, but Death.

My impression was an odd one. I found myself not looking upon a new born child, but an old man. The craft and guile and foulness of the world seemed to peep at me from the one open eye of this helpless babe.—Dr. Haiselden's description of the shock he experienced when he saw Baby Bollinger for the first time.

Cross, Feverish Child Is Bilious or Constipated

Look, Mother! See if tongue is coated, breath hot or stomach sour.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their favorite laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the stomach, liver and bowels without any griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother; if coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative" and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers know "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. New Way to Curl Hair Without Heated Irons

Hair tortured with the curling iron is bound to become dry, harsh and brittle, and so many have been sad experience. It's far more sensible to use plain liquid silmerine, which can do no harm to hair, which produces the loveliest wavy effect imaginable. It takes so little time to apply the silmerine and the hair can be put up in curl in any form, to any style to conform with any style of hairdress, and it will stay there, too. The dressiest will last a long time once the curl is impressed. Liquid silmerine is not greasy or sticky and it doesn't stain or streak the hair or the scalp.

A convenient way to use it is to pour about two teaspoonfuls into a saucer and then, with a clean tooth brush apply evenly to the hair from root to tip. If this is done before retiring the added glory to one's "crowning glory" will be quite in evidence in the morning.—Advertisement.

"Does It Have to Live?' Asked Father of Child Whose Case Stirred Nation.

No hope there—only the old horror and dread.

And here was the reason for this difference.

The father had gazed upon his child; the mother had not.

STILL HOPE IN MOTHER'S EYES.

The man knew; the woman did not.

Doom was written there in the eyes of the father; there was still cheer and hope in the kind, suffering eyes of the mother.

"We will follow your advice," Bollinger told me at last. "You must decide. Isn't that what you say, Anna?"

"Yes," said the mother. But she said it hopefully.

Bollinger went back to his work in the car shops—a stricken, broken, saddened, humiliated man.

And the woman lay there on her little white bed, looking at the bright yellow flowers—with now and then a ghost of a smile curving her lips.

I left her and went to the emergency operating room on the first floor, where lay Baby Bollinge. It lay under a little blue dotted quilt.

I turned back the covering slowly and gazed for the first time upon this unfortunate scrap of life.

My first impulse was a strange one for a man immune to sights of dread, sickness, sorrow, pain, death, loathsomeness.

I wanted to replace the coverlet. I wanted to go out into the bright sunshine of the Winter morning and walk mile after mile.

I am a lover of life—lusty, vigorous, bounding life. I love nothing better than the quick rush of blood into the cheek of healthy, normal, happy people. My own life I have devoted to saving life. I love life too well to sacrifice the tiniest spark of it. I love life too well to toy with it for the purpose of adding to my professional reputation. I have always been in love with life. Life I have always regarded as a beautiful, wonderful thing—a great privilege and a blessing.

My greatest joy is to give life; to save life; to restore life—to set the feet of happy, healthy humans springing along the glad pathway of life.

But under that little coverlet, worked carefully by the fingers of the mother, I found not Life, but Death.

My impression was an odd one. I found myself not looking upon a new born child, but an old man. The craft and guile and foulness of the world seemed to peep at me from the one open eye of this helpless babe.

I drew back, startled and shocked.

I actually had to steel myself before I could look again upon this blighted thing.

The day was no longer bright. A cloud had come across the shining sun. I stood there with horror gripping at the pit of my stomach. I shook. I felt cold perturbation burst forth on my forehead.

Remember this. I had not even examined this child. Its imperfections were hidden from me in that first glance. I did not know then what I knew later, that this little body was shriveled and blasted, beyond all hope; that the tiny brain behind this baleful eye was not a live thing—but a dead and fearsome ounce or two of jelly that could never be anything more than an ounce or two of jelly.

But what I did know—as a man, not as a physician—was that this child was doomed. At its birth it was doomed. Doom lurked in that dreadful eye. Doom filled the whole room. Doom. My ears rang with a somber knell.

There on the table lay the naked child—looking forth upon its first day.

And yet on that same table perched Death.

I was certain. I was sure.

A thought struck me and it was like any other blow. It staggered me.

Here on the threshold of life lay a thing half life and half death. It was horrible; it was monstrous; it shook me.

I am used to life and used to death. I have seen babies born and I have seen men die. And these sights have not affected me in any way that could be described as horrible. But this wedding of the twain in the form of a little child overwhelmed me.

And I had looked at nothing but the one open eye.

I summoned all of my courage, all of my professional hardness—and I turned the coverlet down further and began my first careful examination of Baby Bollinger.

Tomorrow you will read chapter two of this thrilling serial of life and death. Dr. Haiselden has called it HOPELESS.

DOOMED BABY ROBERTS FIGHTS FOR LIFE

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Mary M. Roberts, the defective baby at the Babies' Hospital, whose parents agreed to let her die rather than enter a life of living death, still fought feebly for existence today.

However, no hope was held out for her. It was said that, in the interests of humanity, no effort was being made to save the defective infant. It had been decided at a consultation of physicians not to operate. Those who took part in the consultation were Dr. Robert Abbe, Dr. William A. Downes, Dr. R. F. Kimball and Dr. L. E. Holt.

The following statement was given out:

"The baby is suffering from a not uncommon malformation of the spinal column and spinal cord technically known as spina bifida, with complete paralysis of the lower half of the body. It is our unanimous opinion that no operation should be performed. It would probably shorten the child's life."

This statement is opposed by Dr. Maurice Rosenberg, who was first consulted by the parents of the baby. He holds that an operation should be performed.

JURY NEEDED ON THESE CASES, SAYS WOODS HUTCHINSON

By WOODS HUTCHINSON, A.M., M.D.
By Telegraph to the Editor, Boston American.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 26. — The cause of the Roberts baby vividly illustrates the necessity for some public official or commission to decide such questions from the point of view of humanity and probable results. It would seem that the doctors were mistaken in insisting upon the survival of the upper half of the Roberts baby and forcing it to breathe when nature was inclined to allow it to expire.

On the other hand it must be remembered that if they had failed to do everything possible known to the profession for the preservation of life, any malicious or interfering outsider could have brought them before the courts or the Grand Jury on the charge of malpractice or even of manslaughter.

If the defects are as described in the press it would mean that the baby, at best, with the operation a success, probably would live only six or seven hours at the outside.

Very few children with spinal bifida, except of the very slightest grade, survive beyond their tenth year. The defect consists of an arrest of development of the lower end of the spinal column, so that the spinal cord is exposed or barely covered with skin for from two to six inches right at the base of the hip.

The cord is also badly diseased, so that all parts of the body below the waist are paralyzed as well as deformed and shrunken.

These defects, such as stiff knees and deformed feet, are permanent and cannot be improved by any further operations.

Such a child is no menace to the community. It simply is a question of whether its eight years of half-dead, half-alive existence are worth while to itself.

An operation under such circumstances may be successful and yet deplorable.

The deformities of the feet, although described as clubbed, having nothing in common with ordinary clubbed feet and cannot be remedied in any way as long as the paralysis persists.

Usually death, after an unsuccessful operation for spinal bifida, is by meningitis, agonizing and painful, while without the operation the end is comparatively painless.

AMERICANS ON MEXICAN TRAIN BLOWN UP

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26 — A dispatch from Laredo, Tex., stated that sixty persons were reported to have been killed when a train on the Mexican National railway was blown up several miles south of Nuevo Laredo, early today. The first advices received at Laredo said that the train was carrying Carranza soldiers, but a second report said that several Americans bound for the border, were on board.

Later advices were to the effect that the wreck occurred Tuesday night, between Tampico and Monterey. First reports stated that eighty had been killed, but this was found to be erroneous.

The country south of Monterey is mountainous and has been for a long time infested with bandits.

General Frederick Funston commander of the United States forces on the Mexican border, today reported to the War Department an account of the insulting American officials by Villa officials who crossed the border at Nogales, Ariz.

Colonels Terrazas and Sila, of General Villa's army rode into Nogales and retired American Consul Simpich and Vice-Consul Cochran, according to the report. Later they were joined by thirty Villa soldiers who joined their superiors in cursing and threatening Americans generally.

Why they were not shot, I do not know," said General Funston's report which was made to him by Colonel Sage, the commanding officer at Nogales.

General Funston also reported on attacks made on American patrolling parties. All these were repulsed.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels today turned down a suggestion to land twenty-five or thirty marines at Tehuantepec, on the west coast of Mexico and have them march to Las Mesas, fifteen miles inland to protect Americans whose lives were reported endangered by Indian uprising. The Secretary declared that of it was decided to land any marines at all that a force sufficiently large to withstand any kind of an attack would make up the expedition.

MRS. BURNS WILL COME TO LIVE IN READVILLE SOON

Mrs. Mary A. Burns, acquitted of the murder of her husband by verdict at Portsmouth, N. H.

Mrs. Mary A. Burns, found not guilt by a jury in Superior Court at Portsmouth of the charge of murdering her husband by putting cyanide in his drink, will start life anew at the home of her brother, Ralph Davis, No. 3 Milton street, Readville.

"This is the happiest day of my life," said Mrs. Burns, as she stood in the corridor of a Portsmouth hotel surrounded by her mother, sisters and brothers.

"I am a maniac, but I did that worse before and I may take it up again in Boston," she declared.

As she passed into the street today from the hotel a hundred persons cheered. Then each one congratulated her. Most of them shook her hand, and as they gathered around her she cried.

"Oh, how good the fresh air feels on it is a beautiful day!"

Do you expect to marry again" one in the crowd asked.

Mrs. Burns put up her hand, saying with a smile:

"Never again for me." Then she added: "But I don't know."

ANXIOUS FOR MOTHER.

The smile left her face when she announced that her mother had been stricken ill and had been taken to her home at Madbury. Later she said:

I have just spent the best part that I have passed since I was charged with that crime. Before God I swear I am innocent of poisoning Frank Burns whom I loved.

"The strain of the trial, the nights of anguish I passed in the county jail, the ordeal through which I went for ten days in the courtroom, the severe examination I underwent by the attorneys has weakened me considerably. I must have rest. I shall leave soon for Nottingham, where my mother is ill and brothers. Later I will visit my mother in Madbury for a while.

"Nottingham does not appeal to me any more. The surroundings, with their memories, would prey on my mind were I to stay there for long. I'm merely going back to get my effects.

TO START LIFE ANEW.

"My plan is to start life anew at the home of my brother, Ralph Davis, in Readville, Mass., where things will be more congenial.

"I'm too happy to tell you just how I feel. It's good to know I'm free again at last. I can't say too much in praise of the jurors, Colonel Bartlett, Mrs. Wilbur Shaw, the newspapermen and others who made things as pleasant as possible for me during my stay at the jail and in court.

Mrs. Aurelia Davis, mother of Mrs. Burns, was overjoyed when her daughter was acquitted, and kissed the newspapermen. In addressing her daughter-in-law she was quite calm, but when she kissed her daughter's predicament.

"Just say that I'm happy over the result," she said. "That the suffering I've endured has been cured by the verdict of not guilty. I'm grateful that Mary has been vindicated. I'm well along in years and God knows I've suffered enough."

MOTHER HAPPY AT VERDICT.

"I wanted to be near Mary throughout the trial, and I was. I believed that was my place as a mother. I knew what I felt so happy today to know that I was free once more to go where she pleases. The verdict was a just one, for my daughter never committed that crime."

Edward P. Weeks of Greenland, one of the jurymen, said today that there never was a doubt in his mind as to how he would vote once the State failed to produce evidence to prove that Mrs. Burns put the cyanide in the whiskey that killed her husband.

"They simply didn't have anything against Mrs. Burns," said Weeks. "When we got the case we went to the jury room and talked the matter over a few minutes. Then we took the vote, which stood ten for acquittal and one for conviction. One of the jurors cast a blank ballot.

"After supper we took another ballot, which resulted in eleven for acquittal and one again for conviction. We talked a while and the last juror came over to our way of thinking, and we had an unanimous verdict of not guilty.

I guess Weeks knew what the right idea of the matter was," said Clinton A. Kimball of Dunbar another juror. "I am another who never believed Mrs. Burns guilty."

VERDICT POPULAR ONE.

That the verdict was a popular one, the sentiment of the moments heard on the streets of Portsmouth. A man and woman who have followed the case from start to finish. Several society women were so delighted with the verdict that they hugged Mrs. Burns after she had been set free from her confinement, which occurred soon after it was rendered.

Colonel Bartlett, counsel for Mrs. Burns, was personally thanked by the latter. In addition he was warmly greeted by brother lawyers.

"I have no doubt of the verdict from the start of the case," he said. "There was no evidence to show Mrs. Burns poisoned her husband."

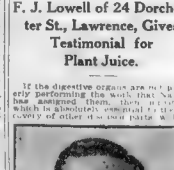
ENGINEER ON THE BOSTON & MAINE

F. J. Lowell of 24 Dorchester St., Lawrence, Gives Testimonial for Plant Juice.

If the digestive organs are not properly performing the work that Nature has assigned them, then much of which is allowed to remain in the system of other tissue parts will be lacking, and there can be no permanent relief. When bodily nutrition is normal, the stomach digests the food, the blood absorbs and carries the nourishment to the different parts of the body, causing the various organs to properly perform their functions. Nature has provided a remedy in the elements of Plant Juice. The new natural system tonic, now being introduced here. It is purely vegetable and its vitalizing, corrective and reconstructive qualities are so pronounced that beneficial results are noticed from the first day. That this is true, it is only necessary to listen to the statements made daily by local people who have given Plant Juice a fair trial and have been benefited.



F. J. LOWELL.

One of the most recent signed testimonials received is from Mr. F. J. Lowell, who resides at No. 24 Dorchester Street, Lawrence, who is a popular and well-known engineer of the Boston & Maine Railroad. He has been in its employ for the past 11 years and is of the highest integrity and honesty. He states:

"I have had much trouble for the past three years, which took the form of poor digestion and dyspepsia. My food fermented in my stomach and I was in great distress after eating. I had dreadful pains in the pit of my stomach, bad headaches, dizzy spells so that I would fall to the floor. My bowels were constipated most of the time. I never felt that I was entirely cured, but since I began to keep at home I have now taken three bottles of Plant Juice and it has made a new man of me. I feel it is the only cure I can get any kind of food without it seems to have no more headaches, sleep well and will be glad to recommend it to any one."

The Plant Juice Store is at the Lynn end of the subway corner of Washington and Avon Streets, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of it's remedy. Advertisement.

EAT LESS MEAT AND TAKE SALTS IF KIDNEYS HURT

Says a teaspoonful of Salts flushes Kidneys, stopping Backache.

Meat forms Uric Acid, which excites Kidneys and weakens Bladder.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys seem acting sluggish or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any druggist or drug store, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Advertisement.

TRACE MOVE OF SHIPS AT PLOT HEARING

TRACE SHIP NEPOS

When court opened Rand asked for several corrections in the written minutes of the trial to show that the defense waived no rights when they consented to the consolidation of the indictments. The government replied on by tracking the movements of the steamship Nepos another of the twelve supply ships chartered by the Hamburg American line. The Nepos, a report of the Nepos and that chapter of the story.

Nelson was called to the stand. Perth Amboy said in August, 1914, when he was informed by the owners that the Nepos had been chartered to proceed to Philadelphia and report to Joseph H. Thompson, one of the defendants in the Hamburg-American offices.

"I went to Philadelphia," he said, and saw Mr. Thompson. He told me to report to Captain Falenberg on the Nepos."

Again the case of the Berwind, as testified to by Captain Falenberg on Wednesday, the Hamburg American officials received facts and Superintendent ordered the captain to take orders from them. This account of the Berwind trouble off the sea.

The Nepos was sailed with a full cargo of coal and provisions and her supposed destination was to Mc Lean Nelson stated that it was reported at the offices. The Nepos left Philadelphia for Montevideo.

From the superintendent Nelson went to sail for the Cape Verde Islands Tenerife. I want them to use that as a port of call."

Next he wanted me to go to the Canaries. He asked me to go to Tenerife to wait there because that was a port of call.

CONSUL BOUGHT COAL

The Hamburg-American case was cancelled the charter of the German consulate bought the coal that Nielsen carried. Nielsen remained at Tenerife 144 days and then took his ship back to Cape Hatteras.

Attorney Isaac tried to get the skipper to admit that the consulate at Tenerife and not go to Montevideo because the Canaries were controlled by British warships. Nielsen said there was nothing to it with the movements. He returned to Tenerife with Dr. Bunau-Varilla. Asked if the consulate that the charter of the Nepos was a chief Four days later he sailed

Joffre Appeals to Army to Help With 'Loan of Victory'

PARIS, Nov. 26.—General Joffre, Commander in Chief of the French forces, has issued the following general order to the army:

France has issued a great loan to provide funds for expenditure on the national defence. All the appeals she has made since the beginning of the war have had ready response. This because every one knows the riches of France; because every one has confidence in her destinies and a favorable termination of the struggle.

All those who subscribe fulfil the duty of a good Frenchman. They also will find their advantage in it. Whoever pays in 87.25 francs will receive an obligation bearing 5 francs interest annually, an investment in French bonds at 5 73-100, per cent.

You have doubtless heard your parents recall the terrible hours of 1870. After that war there was a loan for the liberation of territory. This time, thanks to your efforts, it will be, as the Minister of Finance has said, "the loan of victory."

Think about all that. Write about it to your relatives and the friends that you left behind at your birthplace. Tell them that to subscribe to the loan is to serve France; that it is to fight for her with you; that it is to give you the most effective aid possible at the present time, and that it is to assure your future and that of your children.

J. JOFFRE.

We cleared for Morrosta by way of Tenerife, he said.

On the way Nelson told Nielsen that they might meet the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, a German auxiliary cruiser.

Nelson told the German officer that he thought he ought to be given a guarantee of identity.

Flor, he said, told him the German consulate at Tenerife would take care of him. At Tenerife there was a fire in the Nepos hold that destroyed nearly all the provisions for the United States.

John J. Turner, the next witness, chartered the Pram to the defendants. He appeared to be a reluctant witness. He also chartered the Bomerstadt to the Hamburg-American Philadelphia.

The defence scored a point when Turney said that he approached Hachmeister and made the proposition to charter the Pram. He also said he took the initiative in chartering the Somerstadt. Turney also chartered the Mowinckel, the Heina, the Cuba and the Nepos.

Turner admitted that he made out the manifests for all those ships in his office without seeing them to Isaac. He got his information from Hachmeister. The Somerstadt cleared for Cadiz, Spain; the Mowinckel for Monrasta via Tenerife, the Nepos for the same destination, the Heina, Cuba and the Pram for South America.

Crimson Calls for a Longer Vacation

That Christmas vacation is again worrying the editors of the Harvard Crimson, who are clamoring for an extension of the eleven day recess to at least two full weeks. The Crimson says:

"As at present planned the vacation is very brief, when it is remembered that for many men this is the only vacation offering any possibility of a visit home. It does not allow time for men from the Western Mississippi Valley and beyond to reach their homes by Christmas day or to remain for New Years.

Women Flock to Take Up French "Victory Loan"

PARIS, Nov. 26.—There was a rush of women, many of whom were mourning, at the first day's subscriptions to "the great loan of victory," as the new French loan has been characterized by the Minister of Finance. The lines began forming at 9 o'clock at the special loan windows in all post-offices, at the banks and at the headquarters of the loan at the Pavillon de Flore, in the extreme southern wing of Louvre.

At the postoffices the subscribers crowded the corridors so it was almost impossible to buy postage stamps. At the Credit Lyonnais and other banks, the windows set apart for the receipt of applications had to be doubled, while at the Bank of France the crowd was so big that the police were obliged to use extra precautions.

The first subscription was for $100,000. The greatest sum subscribed by a single individual was $1,000,000.

Burglars Angry Over Empty Safe

Burglars ripped the door off the safe in the provision store of William F. Bropy, at 76 Poplar street, West End, between closing time Wednesday night and this morning. They were evidently angered when they found that the safe contained no money and in a spirit of revenge broke all the tools in the store.

SHOW RAILWAY MOVE IN JITNEY AT TAUNTON

The Interest of the Bay State Street Railway in enacting a bond from jitney operators in Taunton was shown in the Supreme Court today when the auditor's report was read at the hearing on the petition of jitney owners for a writ to compel the city officials to send to the Supreme Court records showing the passage of an ordinance requiring jitney owners to file a $5,000 bond before operating in Taunton streets.

The city passed an ordinance requiring the filing of a bond of $5,000 before a license was given for the first 6 machines, and an additional bond of $1 000 for each other machine. A bond of only $100 is required for horse-drawn vehicles.

Jitney owners claim the city has no authority to exact a bond as the statute does not give it that authority. Judge Dyer continued the case one week to allow City Solicitor Albert R. White an opportunity to look up decisions.

The petition is signed by Mayor Nathaniel J. W. Fish and the fifty Councilmen and is filed by Attorney Fred J. Smith of Taunton.

Before the hearing before the auditor of jitney owners have continued operating.

Dandruff Scaled Off and Showed In Hair. Scalp Itched. Hair Dry and Brittle.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My little girl five years old, was bothered with dandruff and scaly scalp. It was very bad. The dandruff scaled off and showed in her hair. Her scalp itched, causing her to scratch her head a great deal even in her sleep. It had begun to cause her hair to fall out. It was dry and brittle. One month's use of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment totally removed all the trouble. I was bothered with chapped hands. I have used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for eighteen months now and for a year now had no trouble at all with my hands. (Signed) Mrs. Maud B. Crowell, Cottage St., West Lynn, Mass., March 31, 1915.

MASS MEETING

of Protest Against the

ARMENIAN MASSACRES

Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Cambridge will preside.

Address, with Stereopticon, by Rev. James L. McNaughton, recently from Turkey.

Rabbi Abram Simon of Washington.

The public, both ladies and gentlemen, cordially invited.

XMAS HAPPINESS FUND GROWS RAPIDLY

GIVE while you LIVE, is the big truth of the Yuletide spirit, so GIVE TODAY

Now that Thanksgiving is over, show that you are really thankful by GIVING to the Campaign for Christmas Happiness

With Thanksgiving gone, the time is short before the advent of the joyous Christmas time, when everybody should be happy, and when thousands who would be unhappy will be happy if all of you will do your duty and GIVE.

By giving to the Christmas Fund, you will be making the Christmas of some needy family the brighter, and the greater number of givers, the greater will be the number of needy families whose hearts will throb more warmly and whose lives will be gladened because of what you GIVE.

BRING GOOD CHEER.

Remember how it would be were there no gifts the night before Christmas, and all through the house of the needy nothing but sadness—than turn your thoughts to what good cheer GIVING by you and all your friends will bring into those homes of the needy who will lack even food or clothes or toys unless you help the campaign.

Think of the little boys and little girls who face a cheerless Christmas unless you help by GIVING.

Listen to what the children themselves are doing—how the little children have heard the appeal for funds for a worthy cause and have answered it.

Here is a brief note from a little boy but it carries a powerful appeal to you older folk to GIVE at once.

Dear Editor

Here is three cents from little Martha Alinita.

CHILDREN AID CAUSE.

Little Martin, the Campaign Editor has added your site to the fund, and to you he wishes a merry Christmas and a visit from a prosperous Santa Claus and great happiness in your knowledge that you have done your share in helping provide dinners for the needy of Boston

And here is another letter

Dear Editor

I am a little girl, eight years old, and my brother is six. We are sending twenty-five cents each to help get the Christmas basket for some poor little girl. Wish it was a lot of pennies to help. Yours,

Grace and Percy Sullivan

Little Grace and you too, Little Percy—may you both have the happiest, merriest Christmas possible, and may good Kris Kringle bring you all that your little hearts desire.

And here is another letter which tells its own story of Christmas giving—there's a sermon in every one of these thousands of letters that the Campaign Editor is receiving from givers to the Fund.

SEND TWO CENTS EACH.

Dear Editor:

Will you kindly print the following names and amounts as they are from most little children who little boys are helping with their pennies. They have worked hard to save. They will be looking for their names in the paper. Anything you do for me will be much for your kindness. I remain

Your very truly J. Conroy.

Lillian Tamen	2 cents
Charles T. Tamen	2 cents

All happiness to the writer of that letter, and to little Miss Lillian and little Mr. Charles—a right merry Christmas to all of them.

The Campaign Editor has received many such letters, and every one brings more stress to little rules of happiness to the givers.

The entire staff of the Campaign Committee is overtaxed in answering letters one receives and every one contains words of praise for the Campaign for Christmas Happiness. Each letter means another happiness for one of the unfortunate families of the city.

Now to several outstanding events of the many which will feature the Campaign from now on until Christmas.

First there are the DOLLS

These are the dolls which have been dressed by the leading prima donnas of the Boston Opera Company, and by Mme. Anna Pavlowa of the Pavlowa Ballet Russe, which is playing with the opera company at the Boston Opera House.

DOLLS NEARLY READY.

The dolls have been dressed by the prima donnas themselves and represent the costumes of the various nations of the world sung into immortality by the prima donnas. Maggie Teyte, Luisa Villani, Elvira Leveroni and others dressed the dolls, which will be placed on exhibition very soon, and which are to be auctioned off at the Hotel Georgian, the proceeds to go into the Campaign for Christmas Happiness.

While the prima donnas were dressing the dolls the other day, Alexandre Volinine, the dancing partner of Mme. Pavlowa, happened in, became curious to know what was being done, and then volunteered to furnish a doll himself.

"I also shall give—wat you call it—dah? Yes," he said.

He was asked if he intended to dress it up.

"Oh, no, no, sat is for ladies only, not for man," he answered. "If I do so everybody make fun and call me a—ah—what you call?"

"Molly-coddle" someone suggested

"Yes, yes, zat ees, it

Then the young dancer had a happy thought. He would have a doll dressed for him by a fashionable dress maker

"My good friend, Matthews, I meet him in Paris I meet him in Birmingham, now he be in Boston. Voila! He shall dress for me dahl as Prince in "Puppen-Fee." He designates of modes—what you call dressmaker."

Volinine's offer was accepted, and he will be the only male member of the organization to give a doll to the AMERICAN. He hurried to his dressing room and brought forth the costume he wears as Prince Charming in "Puppen-Fee." This was sent to Richard Matthews with a doll to be dressed in a duplicate costume.

WATSON ASSAILS ARRAIGNMENT AT STORROW RALLY

James A "Jerry" Watson, candidate for re-election to the City Council, made a bitter attack on the Good Government Association at a rally in Pemberton square at noon today. Messrs Storrow, Attridge, Collins and Kenny, who have been indorsed by the Good Government Association, were also assailed by Watson.

Storrow is financing the Good Government Association, according to a statement made by Watson. He asserted that this organization would be without funds if it were not for Storrow, who, he claims, will spend at least $10,000 in the city political fight.

Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara happened to walk through Pemberton square while Watson was speaking. The candidate for the Council greeted the commissioner and informed his audience that O'Meara would at one time have been a candidate for the office of Mayor of Boston if it had not been for the opposition he received from the Good Government Association. Watson said he believed O'Meara would have been elected Mayor if he had entered the fight.

Councilor Hagan was criticised by Watson. He said that Hagan favors the same interests that are now supporting Storrow, Attridge, Collins and Kenny.

Beautiful Hair Tinting

Absolutely and Positively Harmless "Brownatone" Instantly Changes the Hair to Any Shade of Brown (or Black if Preferred).

Nothing so much detracts from the good looks and attractiveness as gray, streaked or faded hair. And there is no more certain sign of age or sooner invites disparaging remarks than hair that is constantly wearing unbecoming gown. Nearly all of the numerous home hair tinging agents are more or less injurious to the hair and scalp, and so apt to stain the skin, but also the color, most becoming.

WHITE ASSAILED FOR BANDAGES HE WEARS

Joe Lannin, sporting editor of the St. Louis Post Dispatch, and one of the best posted baseball critics in the Middle West, is much disturbed over the legitimacy of all the knock-outs chalked up by Battling White, the Chicago lightweight, who is registering in the ring of the Auditorium A. A.

What's wrong that White's bandaging method is, if the same as when he used Harold Callahan, the Brooklyn lightweight in St. Louis last Winter, are quotes Writes Wray:

"Every time White has been following the knockout record of Charles White of the league lightweights, there was more or less a little incident that occurred at the Coliseum here which left Referee Frank Erno and Commissioner Lust about room right on his record as one in the 'savvy' line.

White has put away in less than nine fighters this year, all of good standing, which is the high-water mark in the record. During three of the bouts he was in the ring, White stopped but one opponent, it will be remembered.

It is hinted that White's bandaging methods, if they still follow the lines White adopted against Callahan, might contribute not a little to explain the matter.

Spectators will recall that White's hands were heavily bound up when he appeared on the above mentioned occasion. Inspection by competent ringsiders brought out that White's hands were heavily taped and the bandages soaked until they were hard.

A punch dealt squarely with either glove would have the effect of a blow with a bludgeon, almost. Referee Eddie Randall also objected, but White stepped out of the ring and was about to quit rather than go ahead without the bandages as they stood.

Reluctant to disappoint the crowd Callahan waived his objections and stood the chance. He came through all right, although he appeared about to go out more than once during the contest.

If White is winning his contests with this sort of taping, he is getting credit for knockouts he doesn't deserve and wonder conditions which will not be permitted in championship contests.

It does not seem possible, however, that referees of various cities would let White get away with that sort of bandage. They might as well let him use a lead pipe.

THE Atlas A. A. management does not intend letting Ua Wasa Lewis match slide be unless it finds a reasonable inducement to bring the two Battle stars together

LEWIS is willing to come in at 134 pounds at 3 o'clock for White, but the Chicago boy is holding out for 138 at 8 p.m. That's the hitch, and the hitch which caused the match, all but closed for next Tuesday night, to be tabled for the time being

WHITE is a legitimate lightweight. In fact, Charley is one of the few members of the division who can really come in at the old, original notch—134.

WHILE Lewis is a welter, Ted must be applauded for standing willing to pose a forfeit of fifty dimensions that he will make 134 at 3 o'clock for White, as for the other notch—138 at 8—Ted declines with thanks.

MESSRS. IVY LEWIS and Mish Murray have done the best they can in next week's show, the final one of the season at the Arena. The principals are to be Ted Lewis and Mike Glover.

DON'T laugh, control yourself. Glover met Lewis in Ted's first visit to Boston, and, while clearly outclassed survived the twelve rounds without any difficulty

GLOVER is a welter, you know, so when Lewis meets the South Boston boy, he isn't going against a little fellow, as generally happens to be the case.

MIKE has the heft and Mike is a very no-no fighter, as already remarked, he really gave Lewis his toughest scrap in Boston, so mayhaps Atlas A. A. members are going to be the recipients of a pleasant surprise next Tuesday night

HOWEVER, business will fall off badly, in all likelihood. Glover, after suffering several reverses in row, should have been it to New York. He ads pits are elsewhere instead of playing the bush towns of New England

HANGING around Boston, and not fighting much, has cost Mike a lot of his popularity. But in signing Lewis he nor his friends can complain that he hasn't been afforded his come-back chance

NEXT week's semi-windup will be pulled by Gorge Alger and Charley Byers. It should be a busy number. Young Jasper and Sammy Mans and Teddy Murphy and Sammy Stern will also go on.

JACK BUZZY, manager of Sammy Stern, declared yesterday he is the coming king of the New England bantams. Sammy is a rattling good little workman; honest and willing to mix, but as soon as he gets her to the front ranks of the game, should be hard to beat

TIMOTHY LOONEY is pitching Howard and McRea, the Cambridge featherweights, and he says he must Tommy Flanagan or Joe Morgan on the winner-take-all basis. Time's now or never, and that $100 be posted for weight

RITCHIE MITCHELL of Milwaukee, champion of the Middle West, is aiming his phobos and clippers, of course, one Fred Welsh in the international Mitchell-Attorney Cline event. What's better, "Broncho Bill" says he and Ritchie will box 10 full rounds if they want to. Wins power to them

HARRY POLLOK is getting modest. Going to fat and can't help noticing to any about Pittsburgh Phil, Pollok says he'll be happy a draw on a 10-round go for a set to with Welsh.

CORNELL NOT CHAMPIONS, SAYS MAHAN

PENN RIGHT THERE TILL LAST PERIOD

By EDWARD W. MAHAN,
Harvard Captain and Star Halfback.
Written Expressly for the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—In the annual football game between the University of Pennsylvania and Cornell, which was played on Franklin Field yesterday afternoon and resulted in a 24 to 9 victory for the Ithacans, neither eleven displayed a calibre of gridiron work which would warrant them as being recognized as champions.

Although Cornell won by fifteen points, it was not until the last quarter that victory was assured. For the first three periods the Red and Blue put up a wonderfully game fight against what was predicted to be overwhelming odds.

The University of Pennsylvania can attribute its defeat to the poor style of defensive play it used against Cornell's heavy attack. Captain Barrett used a very simple attack, with heavy reference on the tackles, and varied it with change of direction plays. The only defense that can be used successfully against such plays is for the linemen to spill the interference and pile up the play, while the secondary defense does the tackling. To do this the line must shift so as to be in a position to meet the heavy interference of its opponents.

PENN TACKLES UNSUPPORTED.

The mistake of Pennsylvania in permitting consistently the tackles to bear the brunt of the Cornell attack, was not given enough support by the linemen on the opposite side. To be sure, Penn did stop these plays to a certain degree during the first three quarters, but it was due to the fact that its defensive backs were playing within five yards of the line of scrimmage and were up hard to meet the plays.

Why Cornell failed to take advantage of Penn's close secondary defense and pass over their heads, is unexplainable. Play to the tackles, to a forward passing game, which would have driven the secondary defence men of the Red and Blue back, the Cornell running attack would have proved much more effective.

The fact that the secondary defense played so close to the line of scrimmage [illegible] themselves as soon they would surely have got a shot at Barrett.

RESORT TO PASSING GAME.

Pennsylvania found out soon after the start of the contest that it could not rely on plain Barrett's kicking, so the Red and Blue resorted to a passing and running game. The combination made by Penn was due in great part to two beautifully executed forward passes.

The first of these was thrown by Miller, who made a perfect pass to Hopkins—the pass covering forty-five yards, and the net gain was fifty-one. Another pass, Miller to Bell soon followed, and this one put the ball on Cornell's twenty-yard line from where Penn went over the final chalk mark for a touchdown.

Penn's other long forward pass which netted fifty yards, was easily the feature play of the game. It was the result of a beautiful shift play. Miller dropped back, went back to the kicker's position, and two of the backs and one lineman were out ahead ten yards from the line of the scrimmage line. Miller received the ball and, instead of kicking the pigskin quickly shifted, hurled the ball to the left, where the Cornell defence was the weakest.

As the ball was put into play Hopkins, Penn's left end, dashed down the field and after covering forty-five yards turned and caught Miller's perfect heave. This play was attempted set ral times afterwards, but each time it was thrown to the right, owing to the fact that Captain Barrett intercepted every such pass.

Barrett's running and all around playing was the talk of the Cornell section. He has been long and hard, and very well covered by his mates.

BARRETT PUNTS FINELY.

Soon after the first kickoff Barrett got away a beautiful kick which covered, including the roll, almost sixty yards, going out of bounds inside of Penn's ten-yard line and put the Red and Blue on the defense for the first start. Captain Barrett was ably supported while carrying the ball by the other three backs, while Shiverick and Collins are made substantial gains.

His down-field work and defensive playing of the Cornell ends, Shelton and Leahy, was exceptionally clever. Shelton was down under every kick and his tackling was hard and sure. Time and time again he threw his Penn opponents his length backward on the ground.

All [illegible] attempts to round Shelton's ends were futile. Coal, the shifty Penn centre, played a sterling game on the defence, while his open field tackling was especially noteworthy. Coal and Mueller backed up the line in quite effective style.

PENN BATTLES PLUCKILY.

[illegible] a very powerful [illegible] start to Buck a Penn [illegible] a great [illegible] on the offensive. On the offensive Penn was the best line bucking team. This Big Penn warrior ripped up the Cornell line in great style, making many substantial gains during the contest.

Bell the Penn quarterback, varied his attack in the proper manner and kept the Cornell defence guessing. One of the outstanding features of Penn's play was the work of Foucks, who was substituted for Bell in the fourth quarter.

Penn's running back of kicks, next to Captain Barrett, Penn, was the best [illegible] work of the game. To defensive playing of Rockefeller, Herring was brilliant in the extreme. He [illegible] was a tower of strength. [illegible] the while Rockefeller's open field tackling stood out prominently.

[illegible] was [illegible] played and the men, all [illegible] played hard [illegible] deserved to be [illegible] to touch it.

[illegible] smoke. My horse [illegible] and when you have [illegible]

I was fearful, for more than [illegible] hours, that when I began to [illegible] THIS instalment of my story I should have to say

Baby Bob is not coming to Boston, after all.

But he IS coming, my dears, and THAT is my story.

I was up early, I had said in the morning prayers, had shaved, and was about to pull my chair to the breakfast table, when the doorbell rang.

It was Chief of Police John A. Stout.

"This," I said, "is INDEED a pleasure! Won't you step in?"

"Always a pleasure to enter YOUR pleasant home, Mr. Sunshine," said Johnny Stout, "but this time I am not certain that my call will be a happy one for either of us. The fact of the matter is, I am compelled to serve this injunction on you."

"Injunction?" I said.

"A law paper," Chief Stout explained, "forbidding you to send, carry, ship, or permit to be sent, carried or shipped, your little Baby Bob to Boston."

"But this is outrageous," I said. "His mamma, his brother and his sister are already in New England. The baby MUST go!"

"He cannot go and he MUST not go," said the Chief, "until this injunction is removed. If I have to summon every candy policeman within twenty miles."

"But the explanation," I [illegible] added, "who issues this injunction, and why?"

"Haven't you seen the [illegible] newspapers?" asked the Chief.

"The Sunrise Gun?" I [illegible] I take it in, every morning, but I have not yet had a chance to [illegible] at it."

"You'll find this injunction explained on the first page," said the Chief, "in the leading article of the morning."

I ran for the paper and, just as the Chief had said, found the story on Page 1.

To make a long story short, and not to burden you with the details, the report, which was a mess of "is-saids" and "according-to-rumors," set forth that Mrs. Sunshine had lost an arm through the carelessness of a boy in Worcester, Massachusetts, that Peter was backed by scissored last Sunday [illegible] in Milford, and that Martha will [illegible] sit in her automobile next [illegible] Her license has been taken away by an officer near the Parker House in Boston. The inference, as to Patience and Peter, was that boys and girls are chiefly useless [illegible] causes to scissors. I do [illegible] well.

The story filled two columns. "There were [illegible] Peter and Martha.

But this is all nonsense, I said. Undoubtedly," said the Chief Stout, "but I will have to prove it, Mr. Sunshine."

What I [illegible] was this: [illegible] Judge Rashly, you know."

"I might have known it," I said. "I ALWAYS jump at conclusions [illegible] is ALWAYS ready to believe the worst of a man. His theory is that [illegible] guilty until he is proven innocent. [illegible] is that a man is innocent [illegible] proved [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

ANSWER TO-MORROW—

PICKING STONE TO HEAD TRADE PLAN A ROMANCE OF FINANCE

By B. C. FORBES.

"Why did you select Mr. Stone to be president of the greatest international enterprise ever conceived by Americans?"

That was the question put to Frank A. Vanderlip, originator of the $50,000,000 American International Corporation which is to extend American financial and commercial frontiers to the ends of the earth.

And why did Charles A. Stone, multi-millionaire, senior partner of a huge conspicuously successful firm, consent to tear up his Bostonian roots, transplant himself to New York and accept a tremendous load of responsibility, running always the risk of failure after he had already won success, fame and fortune?

Mr. Stone was known to be no mere money-making machine. He had made all he could ever need—and a comfortable surplus.

MR. STONE'S CAREER.

As head of Stone & Webster, founders of sound, well-managed public service and other corporations all over the United States, he could devote as much time as he chose to his hobbies, to disinterested civic duties, to education.

Harvard had conferred on him an honorary degree. He had built a model school in Boston. He was devoted to horses, a breeder of Morgan horses and Welsh ponies, as many Boston folk chose in New York and elsewhere. He enjoyed running his own yacht.

Why should such a man accept a job?

Why did the job seek him?

Let me tell the story.

It will be an inspiration to young America. It will encourage ambition. It will conduce to honesty, energy, perseverance. It will inculcate roundabout lessons in the management of men, efficiency and system in upbuilding a business.

WHY STONE WAS CHOSEN.

"That is a very interesting question, Mr. Vanderlip replied. He immediately turned from the pile of papers on his desk, beckoned me to sit down in one chair and seated himself in another.

It was evident the subject appealed to him. Busy though he was—the president of the nation's greatest financial institution, with its half-billion deposits, he not an idler in these history-making days.

"I'll tell you," he said.

"When the idea of the American International Corporation was first developed in the minds of some of us it was not the question of finding the money that troubled us. To raise $50,000,000 was a small matter.

"How to vitalize the $50,000,000, how to make American finance and commercial power throughout the world, how to send the American dollar into other lands to open the way for American merchandise—that was the one great problem.

"MANAGEMENT, NOT MONEY."

"It was management, not money, that exercised us—brains, practical experience, judgment, vision, energy, plus patriotism.

"We needed the whole country. We quickly found that the ideal man seemed to be Charles A. Stone.

"His firm, Stone & Webster, had attained phenomenal success in the practical and public fields and had a very broad way, and by high-grade, high-minded, unionless men in its business methods. The firm stood at the top in its sphere. Nobody had ever noticed a derogatory line about Stone & Webster.

"I knew his personality and liked that very much. I knew he was even a broader man than his business. He had done big things not only in business, but in education, especially technical education, and in other directions. He was a man of fine character, of great energy, of excellent judgment.

"And he was a rare judge of men as well as a manager of men. He built up an organization which, if it had played football, would have played good football, because it understood and practiced team play.

"But when I mentioned him to one or two people—'whether,' 'if,' 'is ridiculous to talk about him,' they said. 'He is the one man out of one of the most successful firms in the United States. He has got all kinds of interests, national and industrial, in Boston. He is one of Boston's leading citizens. You cannot transplant that man over here.'

"Well, I took it upon myself to ask him to come over to New York and have a talk. He hadn't the slightest idea of what it was about.

"He came. He sat in that chair you are in and I in this.

"I unfolded the idea to him.

"It was as much a surprise to him as if the President had proposed to you that you go to the Court of St. James as Ambassador.

"It struck him at first as impossible.

PROJECT ATTRACTS STONE.

"But his mind was quick to grasp the meaning of the whole project was attractive. It was alluring to him mind.

"He went home to think it over. Then he came back.

"I am ready for the job,' he said, 'ready to devote as much time to it as ready to come here and live.'

"He made the decision because he believed it was the finest idea that had ever been presented—that it was something more than merely making that it was destined to be a great national instrument.

So much for how Mr. Stone came to be selected.

Said Mr. Stone the other evening to a friend:

"I believe it is my duty to the young men for whose future I am responsible to enlarge their opportunity in the sphere of their particular vocation as much as I can.

"This is one of the reasons I have consented to give up my own well established business to assume a position heavy with responsibility and anxiety to myself."

One of Mr. Stone's cardinal business mottoes is:

MAKE EVERY GOOD MAN ORGANIZE HIMSELF OUT OF A JOB.

Each man in his organization must so organize his personal activities that, when expansion brings new positions to be filled, someone stands ready, trained, to take them.

Therefore, when an important man goes out to the frontier to handle a new subsidiary, another is ready to step in and take up the duties.

Stone & Webster control and manage some fifty traction, electric, gas, power and such like companies situated in almost every part of America.

SYSTEM. System. SYSTEM.

That is the keynote of Mr. Stone's organization.

He has sought to combine Prussian efficiency with American sentiment and humanitarianism.

Both Messrs. Stone and Webster are pronounced believers in employees' profits. They were students together at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. They have stuck together ever since, intense in their loyalty—Damon and Pythias.

The laid the foundation of their success by no hit-or-miss, parlor-chair, easy-going method.

STONE'S METHODS.

Some town in Texas might seem ripe for a tramway, or some spot in the Pacific island realm for a power plant, or some other field for activity.

One or the other of the partners would go to the place, eat, drink and breathe the project. He would visit the cities was involved and established.

As the firm expanded younger partners would be sent to the firing line to win their spurs.

A spirit of camaraderie was cultivated. Each man felt that the success of the whole was built up.

Said one of Mr. Stone's friends:

"He has never lost a ten-per cent or a one-year asset. If he saw signs of trouble ahead he would instantly cut out an asset even if he could.

"Stone is the sort of fellow that, if you are running a race and he is behind and he comes in, it is like opening the window and letting in a cool, fresh breeze.

"He has an incisive mind. His personality is of nice equipoise and of commanding power. You feel his intellectual force and his personal warmth at the same time. He is the essence of honesty and fair dealing."

No person will be not astonishing the greatest board of directors American history has ever known, that he has chosen Charles A. Stone as president of the corporation that is to fish the nations of the world and industrial battles in foreign fields.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were stronger at the opening in New York and continued to rise during the first half hour. The market was active with the bulk of business in war orders. Dealings in coppers were of moderate volume. Rails were dull and heavy. The news attributed the activity of the issues of corporations engaged in manufacturing munitions. Sentiment after the holiday appeared to be more optimistic than at any time previously this week. Railway statistics continue to furnish bull arguments. Before long the country will realize that transportation systems have been doing a more profitable business than for several years. The Minneapolis & St. Louis road reports for the last fiscal year net earnings $116,607, as compared with a deficit of $55,192 for the previous one.

Southern Pacific's net earnings after taxes for the first months of this fiscal year total $19,219,795, compared with $14,628,918 for the corresponding 1914 period. The increase is $4,532,267. Although many traders are still out of town there was more disposition to extend operations. The Bank of England reports that its proportion of reserve to liabilities is 37.49 per cent, the exact figure of its previous statement.

GAINS AVERAGE SMALL.

Early gains in New York averaged small, but General Motors was an exception, selling within half an hour of 147, or twenty-one points above Wednesday's closing price. Texas Oil was weak, declining more than three points, getting within that period. New Haven sold as low as 75, off 1¼.

Gains at 10:15 included Allis-Chalmers ¼, Baldwin Locomotive ¾, Smelting, ex-dividend, ¾, Lackawanna Steel ¾, U. S. Steel ¼, Car & Foundry ¼, American Locomotive ¾, Baldwin 1¼, Colorado Fuel ¾, Crucible ¾, Central Leather ¼, Westinghouse ¾, Studebaker ¼, Maxwell ¼, Utah Copper 1¼, Chino ¼, Anaconda ¼, Baltimore & Ohio ¼, Canadian Pacific ¼, Chesapeake & Ohio ¾, Lehigh Valley ¼, New York Central ¾, Southern Pacific ¼, St. Paul ¾ and Union Pacific ¼.

Rock Island was off ¼, Pennsylvania ¼ and Northern Pacific ¼.

PRICES WERE HIGHER HERE.

Prices were higher in the Boston market when it opened and early trading was of considerable volume. Among the most active issues were Alaska Gold, New England Cotton Yarn and Mexican did since. Fluctuations were not wide, however, in any class. There was trading in Gains at 10:10 included Alaska Gold ¼, Butte & Superior ¾, American Coppe ¼, Lake ¼, Mohawk ¾, U. S. Smelting ¼ and Utah Copper ¼.

Among declines were Quincy, ex-dividend, ¼, and Ventures Oil ¼. Later on, as the day wore on, the volume active until put under pressure in New York, showed a loss of 1½.

USE WAR PROFIT FOR SPLURGE IN BROADWAY

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 26.—In two chartered Pullmans a party of forty-two men and women, wealthy and socially prominent, left here today for New York. They will spend a week and there in a style that would make Coal Oil Johnny jealous and Butch McDevitt feel like a piker, if they could get a look in on Nouse.

For six months, or ever since the rise in du Pont common and General Motors stocks turned millions loose in Wilmington, individuals who profited thereby have been trolling for some place big enough to make a splurge. Millionaires were getting nearly as common as cab drivers in Wilmington, so they're going to visit New York.

From the time they land in New York until they return Sunday night they will dine, dress, motor and dance from one end the Great White Way to the other. The entire second floor of the Hotel Astor has been reserved for them.

Two men in the party will foot all the bills. They are John J. Raskob, treasurer of the du Pont de Nemours Company, and Frank J. Lashley, a stock broker. They both got rich during the war rush.

"Leave your pocketbook at home," said Raskob and Lackey in their invitation.

The forty-two excursionists are members of a dancing class.

Wilson and Fiancee to See Navy Game

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—President Wilson, accompanied by his fiancee, Mrs. Norman Galt, and a party of ten friends and relatives will leave Washington early tomorrow morning in two private cars for New York. It was announced at the White House today. After viewing the Army-Navy football game tomorrow afternoon the members of the party will be the guests of Colonel and Mrs. E. M. House and will return to Washington Monday.

HARVARD WANTS MORE 'HUMAN' PROFESSORS

The Harvard Crimson comes forth today with a plea for professors to cultivate and students to recognize the fact that professors may still be human.

The professor today, says the Crimson, is merely a sort of "speaking text book." The editorial reads in part:

"In years gone by it was considered one of the essential privileges of a college education to become intimately acquainted with the men of learning of the time, and the homes of the professors used to be thronged continuously with groups of students. Of late years, however, there has been a gradual drifting apart.

"The great bulk that many courses have now attained has made it practically impossible for the instructor even to know his men by name. Added to this, the professor's point of view has changed from men who had a philosophical interest in their students as well as in their subjects, to scientific experts who have devoted their whole energy to exact subject and the best means of imparting it to others.

"The result is that the instructor has become to the student more and more of a speaking text-book, rather than a human being whose friendship is to be cultivated."

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Why Government Should Build and Equip the American Navy

THE AMERICAN will print from time to time a series of brief editorials which you citizens ought to read and then think about.

The AMERICAN means to show you what kind of warships are ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY to defend us from attack; to show you that we will get just exactly the OPPOSITE KIND of warships unless Congress is compelled by the people to right about face, and to show you WHY Congress has persisted in ordering warships built that can neither successfully fight with nor successfully escape from the faster modern warships of England, Germany and Japan.

The warships absolutely necessary to any successful defence of our coasts against the navy of any other first-class power are warships that are as fast or faster than the warships of the assailants.

The first essential factor is the factor of speed. Two modern wars have proved this beyond cavil.

The Japanese fleet totally destroyed the Russian fleet, in the decisive battle of the war, with but little loss to itself, because the Japanese ships in that battle were very much faster than the Russian ships.

The Japanese ships could run rings around the helpless Russian ships, could assume their own distance at will, could concentrate their fire on inferior units, could temporarily withdraw from the range of superior units, and could make or refuse to make battle at any point on the line.

They cut to pieces and sank the whole Russian fleet with hardly a bit of danger to themselves.

Speed and victory were shown then and there to be simply two words with one meaning.

The three naval actions of the present war fought by fleets resulted in two victories for the British and one for the Germans. In one of these the German ships were speedier than the British ships. They destroyed the British squadron with hardly any loss to themselves.

The same German fleet was waylaid off the Falkland Islands by speedier British ships. They destroyed the German squadron with hardly any loss to themselves.

In the third engagement, a running fight, the faster German ships came off with little damage. The slowest German ship, the Bluecher, was shot to pieces and sunk. And this comparatively slow German ship, the Bluecher, was faster than most, if not all, our own battleships. And yet lack of enough speed was her doom.

The heavier the armor on a battleship of any given size, the slower that battleship is.

With a fatuity little short of criminal, it is proposed to build our new battleships with even heavier armor than that which now slows down the speed of the ships we have.

In the next editorial the AMERICAN will tell you WHY it is proposed to waste your money and imperil your safety by building such battleships.

The Republican Machine Has Begun Already to Play Bad Politics

GOVERNOR WALSH has made a complaint which every intelligent Governor has made before him during the last quarter of a century in Massachusetts.

He says that the Governor's Council, elected from gerrymandered districts, exists only to hamper, for partisan purposes, every Governor who is not a machine Republican. He cites examples which amount almost to malfeasance on the part of the council, one the case of a clerk of court where the Republican council is holding up an appointment to allow the incoming Republican Governor to fill the office.

Time and again Republican councils have practically usurped the power of appointment by refusing to confirm an appointment which will displace the man already holding office. When this is done for the purpose of keeping the present incumbent in office it is an unconstitutional exercise of the power of appointment. In this way a bad railroad commissioner was kept in office during Governor Foss' term at the behest of the corporations which the Railroad Commission was intended to regulate.

That the Republican machine is beginning to play bad politics, is beginning to repeat mistakes which drove it from power five years ago and kept it ignominiously out of power in this State for five successive years, is apparent from the denunciation which Charles Sumner Bird now feels called upon to make of his recent Republican associates.

Mr. Bird, in his paper, the Record, in an editorial entitled "Play Square," said:

"PLAY SQUARE WITH THE PUBLIC."

"The Republican party went before the voters of this State with the promise to do so, and won. The party's representatives in the Executive Council, at the first opportunity to demonstrate the sincerity of the campaign obligation, have failed to keep it. They have rejected Governor Walsh's excellent appointment of Earnest E. Smith to the Minimum Wage Board, yielding to the demands of certain manufacturers who claimed they had a right to a representative on that board.

"An appointment made in the interest of the public, and free from political flavor, has been rejected. The demand of a group of interested parties has determined the Council's course.

"That is bad faith.

"It is bad politics.

"The Council has played bad politics.

"It has scored the first demerit for the Republican party since the election."

The machine Republicans want to keep it in their minds that they are a very small minority in this State, and that they owe their election entirely to the alliance which they have formed with the Progressives. The Progressives this year united with them in the belief, under the leadership of Mr. McCall, that the Republicans would show some signs of intelligence and progressiveness. But if they propose now to go back to the old corporation orgies which disgraced the State under Governor Draper, when it was only necessary, in order to obtain legislation, to hire one of the several captains of the lobby, or when it was only necessary, in order to have an appointment confirmed, to interest one or two adepts in high finance.

The AMERICAN confidently believes that Governor-elect McCall silently disapproves of this inauspicious beginning, and so far as it lies in his power will show that the lessons of the State election and of the national election, and particularly his personal experience in the great auction sale in which he was defeated for United States Senator, have radicalized him and have changed his point of view considerably. The change in the point of view means the whole difference between a good and a bad public servant, for where you have a personally honest man it is entirely the point of view which makes him good or bad.

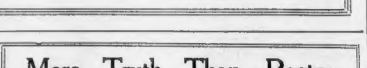
More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

A Hard Luck Story

A Fresno judge has decreed that the wife of a baseball fan should go to the games with him and learn to talk about them intelligently.



I FAIRLY worshipped Elsie until one fateful day
I took her out to Fenway Park to see the Red Sox play.
She swiftly glanced around the field and cried: "Do tell me which
Of those young men is Mister Cobb and if he's going to pitch!"
And though it nearly broke my heart I had one only course;
I hurried right straight down to court and got me a divorce.

I THOUGHT the world of Genevieve, the lady who became
My second wife, until, alas! I took her to a game.
She watched Tris Speaker at the bat and then I heard her say:
"I'd like to see a real big star. Where's Connie Mack today?"
With all the strength I had I choked my wild emotion down,
And, when the court had parted us, I married Nancy Brown.

I LOVED sweet Nancy more than life; I might have loved her yet,
But one day in September, when the Sox and Tigers met,
She pointed Hughey Jennings out and said: "There's Mathewson!
I know him by his picture; but why don't he hit and run?"
She got her papers Friday, and I have no wife at all,
But I can get some pleasure from a first-class game of ball.

The "Samaritan" and the Drunkard's Toast

By Dorothy Dix

IT was growing late. The tide of humanity that earlier in the evening had ebbed and flowed through the streets of the city had receded, leaving the strange and almost appalling sense of desolation and loneliness that comes when the noises of the town are hushed.

The electric lights flared unnoted on the corners; the street cars passed at farther intervals; now and then a night worker hurried by, or the heavy footsteps of a policeman rang out loud and clear in the stillness.

In front of a saloon where the lights shone bright across the pavement stood a tramp, unshorn, ragged, dirty, disgusting. He watched with envious looks the men in evening dress coming unsteadily down the street toward him. They had been drinking deeply, and they stopped before the saloon door and looked at him with maudlin curiosity and pity.

"By Jove," said one, "think of having a thirst like that and not the price of an extinguisher in your pocket. Beats old Tantalus all to pieces, eh? Liquor, liquor everywhere, and not a drop to drink."

Under Stimulus of Drink Outcast Tells Youth How He Fell

He placed his hand in his pocket and proffered the tramp a quarter, but before it could be accepted the other youth interposed.

"Say," he said, "let's do the good Samaritan act up in style if we're going to do it at all, and set Hobo up to a nifty drink."

The other hilariously consented, and the tramp slouched into the saloon at the heels of the two gilded youths. The barkeeper set before them glasses and liquors, and, with a hand that shook, the tramp poured out a brimming drink and raised it to his lips.

"Stop!" cried one of the young men drunkenly, "first make us a speech. It is poor liquor that doesn't unloosen a man's tongue."

The tramp hastily swallowed down the drink, and as the fiery fluid coursed through his veins, he straightened himself and stood before them with a grace and dignity that all his rags and dirt could not obscure.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I look tonight at you, and at myself, and it seems to me that I see in you the picture of my lost manhood. This bloated face was once as young and handsome as yours. These rags were once broadcloth and fine linen. This shambling figure once walked as proudly as you do—a man in a world of men.

Home, Position, Children, Honor, All Forfeited by Drunkard

"I, too, once had a home and family and friends and position. I had a wife as beautiful as an artist's dream, but I dropped the priceless pearl of her love and respect in the wine cup and, Cleopatra-like, saw it dissolve as I quaffed it down in the brimming draught.

"I had children as sweet and lovely as the flowers of Spring, and I saw them fade and die under the blighting curse of a drunken father. I had a home where love lit the flame upon the altar, and ministered before it, but I put out the holy fire with my passion for drink, and darkness and desolation reigned in its stead.

"I had aspirations and ambitions that soared as high as the morning star, and I broke and bruised their beautiful wings, and, at last, strangled them that I might be tortured by their cries no more.

"Today I am a husband without a wife, a father without a child, a tramp with no home to call his own, a man in whom every good impulse is dead. All, all swallowed in the maelstrom of drink."

The tramp ceased speaking. The glass fell from his nervous fingers and shivered into fragments on the floor. The swinging doors of the saloon pushed open and shut to again, and when the little group about the bar, suddenly sobered, looked up, the tramp was gone.

A Fallen Leaf

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

A TRUSTING little leaf of green
A bold, audacious frost;
A rendezvous, a kiss or two,
And youth forever lost.
Ah, me!
The bitter, bitter cost.

A flaunting patch of vivid red
That quivers in the sun;
A windy gust, a grave of dust—
The little race is run.
Ah, me!
Were that the only one.

Inklings and Thinklings

"It is unfortunately true that many people in a great city prefer to be dirty rather than clean," says a grave editorial writer, "but it is better that they should be free in this respect than to be compelled by law to wash themselves." Surest thing you know. It makes our blood boil when we think of the number of people who'd just love to tote guns and brass knuckles, but are compelled by law to go without these knicknacks.
